GREAT PAGEANT AND BALL TO-NIGHT

"The sun shines bright in the old Kentucky Home,
'Tis summer, the darkies are gay;
The corntop's ripe and the meadow's in the bloom,
While the birds make music all the day."

With that selfsame sun diffusing its glorious rays, as if in a benediction to the memory of him who gave to Kentucky and the world the immortal lines; with its transcendent beams lighting and casting shadows about the mammoth edifice in which were gathered twenty thousand of the Commonwealth's fair daughters and illustrious sons, noble tribute and homage were paid yesterday afternoon at the Armory to Stephen Collins Foster.

Gathered within the four solid walls of the structure were thousands upon thousands of Kentucklans—they were all Kentucklans.

Surging and pushing into the immense building the hosts began to arrive at noon, and for two hours the Home Comers strove with each other for the coveted positons. When at 2 o'clock Prof. E. H. Mark, superintendent of the Louisville schools, rapped for order, it was an unprecedented sight that met his gaze. The vast hall was one sea of fluttering humanity. Every chair was occupied on the main floor and in the balconies and there was not room for all who had gathered to honor Stephen Collins Foster. Probably three-fourths of the audience was composed of women and girls, and the panorama of colors was dazzling. Characteristic of the ideal Kentucky gentlemen, the men in the crowd gave up their chairs, some earned by a long wait, and the male contingent largely was on its feet.

Pervading the concourse, however, was the spirit of the song which had been the inspiration for the exercises of the day and over the countenances of all was cast a look of reverence. The exercises were not ordinary; they were of a semi-religious nature and none was so unmindful of that fact to mar the solemnity of the occasion. Though by far the greatest gathering of the week, it was the quietest and closest attention was paid to the addresses.

* * *

Thousand Girls In White.

Occupying the places of honor on the platform were the orators of the day and several distinguished visitors, while on the rising tiers of seats behind sat one thousand girls of the various schools of Louisville, all dressed in white, their young faces beaming the happiness and at the same time the deep sentiment of the occasion. Before all, mounting high on its white pedestal, was the veiled statue of him in whose honor the thousands had gathered. In front further were the expectant multitudes, forgetting the sweltering heat and awaiting only the opportunity to do their part in honoring the revered song writer.

It was a proud moment for Prof. Mark when he called for order. After several moments spent in quieting the throng he introduced the Rev. Dr. E. L. Powell, who pronounced the invocation, in words reverent and touching, glorifying the name of Him who gave to Kentucky this joyous week and imbued the hearts of the school children of Kentucky and other States with the beautiful impulse, the fruition of which was the occasion of the afternoon's meeting.

Then Prof. Mark arose again, to tell of the plan whereby the project of raising a statue to the memory of Stephen Collins Foster was carried through, and he told of the countless contributions of the school children of this and other States, which made the bronze piece possible. He explained that the statue in permanent form is to occupy a prominent place in the new Capitol building now under course of construction at Frankfort, and concluded by introducing Mrs. Jessie Bowman Webb, who was on the programme for a vocal solo.

* * *

Mrs. Webb Sings Solo.

To the accompaniment of the orchestra and piano, Mrs. Webb began her song, and the attentive assemblage recognized the familiar strains of "Old Black Joe." When the people realized that that favorite folk-song was being wafted to them in the clear, sweet tones of the graceful singer, their enthusiasm knew no bounds. Drowning out her notes came the applause from thousands of hands, and it only ceased when, raising her voice to its strongest pitch by an almost superhuman effort, Mrs. Webb, having reached the place where the words are: "I hear their gentle voices—" she surpassed even the applause, and then quiet prevailed again.

Through three verses the audience sat in reverent attention, and as the last low note died away the applause burst out again, more thunderous than ever before. Graciously the singer responded, and as she dashed into the quick, spirited strains of "Dixie" a perfect tumult of applause—a spontaneous outburst of patriotic fervor—soared to the tasseled heights of the immense structure and reverberated throughout its dimensions again and again.

Hardly had the applause subsided when Prof. Mark announced the next number, one that was destined to outdo even the previous outbreak. Rising to their feet the chorus of 1,000 voices, accompanied by the orchestra, under direction of Prof. Carl Schmidt and led by Mrs. Webb, began the opening bars of "My Old Kentucky Home." All previous demonstrations of feeling were dimmed by what followed when the first verse was concluded.

At its beginning there was a scattered applause, but the vast majority of the auditors were too affected by the song and the scene it inspired to give utterance to their feelings. With heads bowed and eyes moist from the depth of the delicate sentiment, they sat quiet. The fresh young voices pouring out over their heads the tones of the well-beloved song, were all that was heard. But for the exquisitely modulated notes as the old song was sent forth in perhaps the most wonderful renditian it has ever had the room was quiet.

Although many times during the present week this same concourse had heard their State's greatest song played and sung, yet they had not yet been so deeply touched. Many of them, affected deeply by the mere fact of their being back home, had been moved to tears before when they heard the stirring words, and the suggested solace in the opening lines of the chorus only served to convulse more deeply those who at first had only sobbed.

Old Home Comers, those who had been absent many decades; returned sons and daughters of the revered Commonwealth who measured their period of absence by a few short years; hundreds who still claim Kentucky as their home State—all gave full vent to the joyful grief that moved them. Quietly they sobbed out the intense emotion, and then came the revulsion of feeling. Almost before they knew it the last resounding note had died away and they were brought back to earth. Slowly the applause began and it grew apace. Then with all the returned energy of the vast multitude it thundered and reverberated; cheer upon cheer rent the air and for fully five minutes the inspiring scene continued in its height. As it began to die away an aged, bent and wrinkled man, his wizened face streaked with the drying rivulet of tears that had coursed down his cheeks, gravely arose from his

James Hargis Granted Bail By Judge Lewis.

Trial Set For October Term of Court.

Posse Goes After John Smith and John Abner.

Ed Callahan and Elbert Hargis Allowed Bail.

Defendants Act As Bondsmen For One Another.

STATEMENT BY CURTIS JETT.

Jackson, Ky., June 14.—[Special.]—Despite the evident change of sentiment in Breathitt county, and apparently unmoved by the fact that two of his former allies have deserted him and in open court confessed that they and he were implicated in murder, former County Judge James Hargis, the alleged chief conspirator in the murders of Dr. B. D. Cox, James Cockrill and James B. Marcum, sat in the doorway of his store this afternoon smiling and announcing his confidence of ultimate victory, with as much tenacity as when three years ago the courts began the struggle to rid Breathitt county of assassins.

Hargis won the first engagement today in his trial for the murder of Dr. Cox, when Special Judge Lewis granted him bail in the sum of $15,000, which which was given without leaving the courtroom. Breathitt people, shocked by the confession of Jett and astounded by the admissions of Asberry Spicer, a confessed conspirator, had begun to believe that the strength of the Hargises was gone and they confidently expected, all save a few of Hargis' closest adherents, that he would be sent to jail without bail. His bondsmen were Floyd Day, A. H. Hargis, William Day, G. W. Sewell and S. F. White.

* * *

Trial Set For October.

The date of the trial was fixed for the October term of court. The Commonwealth has not yet determined whether to ask for a change of venue to another county. Attorney Floyd Byrd, who has persistently fought these cases since the killing of Marcum, said that he believed the sentiment was such in Jackson that a fair trial could be had now.

"The Hargises are no longer the powerful element they were, and without office and power they cannot dominate the sentiment of the community. For the sake of the good name of Breathitt the trial should be held here if possible."

The decision of Judge Lewis to grant bail was reached this morning after hearing a score of witnesses and the arguments of Judge J. J. C. Bach and O. H. Pollard for Hargis, and J. T. Adams and A. Floyd Byrd for the Commonwealth. The decision was a distinct disappointment to the Commonwealth's representatives, but they accepted it without comment. In less than ten minutes Hargis was on the street mingling with his friends.

Curt Jett was introduced again to strengthen his original statement, but did not give any facts not set down in the confession printed in the Courier-Journal. John Deaton denied that he had been sent by Judge Hargis to get Asberry Spicer to come to town for the purpose of killing Dr. B. D. Cox. No effort was made to cross-examine Curt Jett, Judge Hargis denied all knowledge of the murder or any conspiracy connected with it.

Held To Answer.

Former Sheriff Ed Callahan and Elbert Hargis, brother of James and Alex. Hargis, were bound over to await action of the grand jury for complicity in the murder of Dr. Cox. County Judge Taulbee fixed the bonds of each at $15,000, and the two alleged co-conspirators went on the bonds each of the other. On Elbert Hargis' bond were Ed Callahan, James Hargis and Floyd Day, while on the bond of Callahan were Elbert Hargis, James Hargis and Floyd Day. The attorneys for the accused men asked for a special grand jury and a speedy trial, but this was refused.

"Home-Coming" Day For Jett.

This was, indeed, "Home-coming" day for Curt Jett. Until he was taken to Cynthiana this afternoon he had a reception in his cell and hundreds of his old friends shook his hand, many of them congratulating him on his confession. His cell was on the ground floor and opened directly on the street. He stood at the bars and chatted freely with his former associates and was very much the central figure of the day.

Jett's conversion is genuine, and he unhesitatingly declares that he has told all the truth and without any promise of any reward.

* * *

Jett's Statement.

"I know I have nothing to gain," said he to the Courier-Journal correspondent, "but I wanted to unburden my mind. I was being made the scapegoat and James Hargis was trying to put all the blame on me. I know the awful crimes I committed are as black as you newspaper men printed them. But I was not alone to blame. I was young and wild and the influence of Judge Hargis and Ed Callahan led me to the deeds. Uncle Alex. Hargis is innocent, so far as I know, and he has always tried to keep Uncle Jim from trouble. He said to me once years ago, when he and Uncle Jim were at outs: 'Curt, if you don't let Jim Hargis alone and stay away from him, you will land in the penitentiary.' I did not believe it then. I know it now, for I have nothing at best ahead of me but life imprisonment. It was the first shot that caused the trouble. After I shot at Cockrill in that fight the idea of shooting came naturally and my first impulse was always after that to shoot and shoot to kill.

"I would have confessed three years ago and gone free, but then Judge Hargis and Callahan had not deserted me and I would have hanged without confessing. But they have deserted me and tried to put the burden on me. I was tired of carrying the burden and I talked. This fact should be enough to convince the public of the honesty of my confession; that I did not confess when it would have meant freedom and do confess now when no reward is offered."

Says Webster Acted Fairly.

Jett said that Tom White had more than once been on the verge of telling all he knew, but that he (Jett) had persuaded him to hold out. Jett was displeased with the charges made by a Lexington paper that Attorney Stanley Webster had acted in a questionable manner regarding the disposal of the confession.

"I wish you would say that Mr. Webster has been the most honorable young man I know. He prosecuted me, but he was fair and honest and the charge against him is unjust. He knew nothing about the confession until I was ready to make it, and then had nothing to do with it. I wanted it sold. He never suggested it and never had any part in the sale."

Mr. Webster is here at the Arlington Hotel confined to his bed by a nervous breakdown due to worry over the charge of questionable conduct. His friends, however, see nothing in the charge other than chagrin of a beaten newspaper.

Posse After Smith and Abner.

A Sheriff's posse left to-day for Owsley county to arrest John Abner and John Smith on the charge of being in the conspiracy to kill Dr. Cox. Asberry Spicer testified that John Smith fired the shot. Smith and Abner are recognized as among the most desperate men in the mountains and fears are expressed for the safety of the arresting officers.

PAUL BURLINGAME.

JETT'S CONFESSION.

Corroborates Facts Sought To Be Proved By Commonwealth.

Lexington, Ky., June 14.—[Special.] Charles J. Bronston, of this city, one of the lawyers who has been most indefatigable and persistent in the prosecution of both civil and criminal cases against the Hargisses and Callahan, for the alleged killing of Cockrill and Marcum, made the following statement to-day in connection with Jett's confession:

"While there has never existed any doubt in my mind, since my connection with these cases began, as to who were guilty, the confession made by Curtis Jett has not only strengthened the belief previously held by the prosecution, but corroborates every material fact sought to be proved by the State. The thread of the story told by Jett, the continuity of the acts recited, the very facts he gives, all give the confession an impressively serious aspect."

"What is your opinion as to Alex. Hargis' supposed connection with these tragedies, as viewed in the light of Jett's confession?" he was asked.

"Well, much about the same as it always has. The prosecution has been at a loss to secure sufficient evidence against him to prove a guilty knowledge or connection. As a matter of fact, in spite of every investigation made, some of which lasted for months at a time, all the evidence that could be secured against Alex. Hargis was the testimony given by Mose Feltner and those two Jackson women, with some letters written by his wife to Mrs. Marcum. Even with these the testimony was weak against Alex."

BOMB THROWN INTO PARADE

Starts Murderous Attack On Jew Population.

Serious Outbreak In Streets of Bialystok.

Hundreds of Persons Killed or Wounded.

PEOPLE FLEE TO FORESTS.

Bialystok, Russia, June 14.—A Jewish anarchist threw a bomb among the Corpus Christi procession which was in progress here to-day and killed and wounded many persons. In consequence the Christians attacked and massacred the Jews and demolished their shops. Hundreds of persons were killed or wounded.

The bomb was thrown from the balcony of a house in Alexandrov street. A Russian clergyman was among those killed.

Immediately after the explosion Jews began to fire with revolvers from the windows of the house into the crowd. Soldiers surrounded the house and fired two volleys into the windows. Meanwhile the enraged Christians attacked the Jewish stores in Alexandrov and Suraz streets, demolishing the fixtures and windows, throwing the goods into the gutters and beating and murdering Jews. A crowd of Jews fled to the railroad station pursued by the mob, which killed many of them there. Three Jews were thrown from second-story windows of the railroad station. The Jews are fleeing from Bialystok to the neighboring forests and mobs are pursuing them. Detachments of dragoons have been sent out to protect them.

Jews arriving here on railway trains have been dragged out of the cars and many have been murdered. The troops have cleared the railway station. At 4 o'clock this afternoon the disturbances still continued.

FIGHTING IN PROGRESS.

Firing Continuous According To Advices In St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, June 15, 2:15 a. m.—The latest dispatches from Bialystok, which were received about midnight, report a situation of the utmost gravity. The anti-Jewish outbreak there was still raging, fighting was in progress in the streets, the firing was continuous, the best stores in the city had been sacked, and many were dead or wounded. Figures, however, were not given, and probably the casualties are not known in Bialystok, owing to the continuance of disorders.

The signal for the outbreak, which was apparently planned, perhaps as a counterstroke for the murder of Chief of Police Derkatchoff on June 10, which was attributed to Jewish bundists, is given as the explosion of a bomb during a religious procession. This was followed by revolver fusillades in several quarters of the city. The police are said not to have attempted to interfere in the early stages of the riot. The Jews, who number three-fourths of the population of the city, offered the best resistance possible, many of them being armed, but were unable to prevent the pillaging of their homes and places of business. Finally the military interfered, but, according to advices received here, without being able to restore order. Re-enforcements have been rushed to Bialystok from Grodmo.

Several members of Parliament tonight received messages from Jewish correspondents at Bialystok, declaring that the police apparently had given over the Hebrew population to slaughter and pillage. These correspondents urged that the only hope was in an appeal to the Ministry of the Interior to interfere in their behalf. A delegation of deputies immediately called at the headquarters of the police department, where they were informed that all measures possible had been taken to stop excesses and to restore order.

DOWIE'S SANITY

BEING ATTACKED BY ATTORNEYS FOR VOLIVA.

They Elicit From Him Lengthy Description of "Divine Manifestations."

Chicago, June 14.—Pyrotechnic displays during the night accompanied by the sweetest music imaginable were some of the manifestations of the Divine Being visited upon John Alexander Dowie according to his statement to-day on the witness stand before Judge Landis in the trial of the Zion City controversy. Dowie was being cross-examined by Attorney Newman for Wilbur Glen Voliva, successor of Dowie, at Zion City. Attorney Newman led Dowie into a long and detailed explanation of how he witnessed these displays, heard the music and once saved a ship from wreck with prayer. Newman's object was to show that Dowie has never been mentally right; that as a result of this mental condition he saw these visions and that he is not a proper person to head an institution of the character of Zion City and the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church of Zion. At one time while telling of his younger days, the "First Apostle" fell into explanation of his birth. He declared that John Murray Dowie, who has always claimed to be his father, is not his real father, but married Dowie's mother six months after Dowie's birth. Dowie declared that his real father was killed while serving as a soldier in the British army.

Attorneys for Dowie will combat the attempt by Attorney Newman to show signs of insanity on the part of Dowie by proof that the alleged visitations of Divine light were used by Dowie to gather in his followers. Physicians will also be called to the stand to testify as to Dowie's mental condition.

THOUSANDS WILL DANCE AT BIG BALL

DEMAND FOR TICKETS FAR EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

RULES LAID DOWN BY CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE.

WILL BE STRICTLY ENFORCED.

The largest social function ever given in the South will be the grand ball in the Armory, inaugurated by the reception and welcome of Daniel Boone by the Queen of the Ball and her court. The big iron doors of the Armory will be thrown open promptly at 9:45 o'clock, and arrangements have been made for professional doorkeepers.

"Men are to be chosen for the purpose who don't know their friends," said R. S. Brown, chief executive, yesterday afternoon. "They will be backed up by fifty policemen, and no one except men wearing committee badges, county hostesses, maids of honor, commissioners, vice commissioners and persons holding tickets will be admitted. Only one person will be admitted on a ticket, one invitation not being good for a couple. Under no circumstances will children be permitted to enter. The spectators will occupy seats in the gallery, and only persons in evening dress will be permitted on the dance floor. There will be continuous music, a band and orchastra alternating."

Hundreds of persons desiring tickets for the ball were turned away disappointed yesterday and last night. Never before in the history of similar events was there such a demand for ball tickets as at the present time. Robert E. Hughes and others in charge of Home Coming have been besieged by applicants for ball tickets from early morning until late at night. Many seemed unable to understand why their wants could not be supplied and left the Armory in anger.

Fully 10,000 invitations to the ball have been issued, and the throng that will be seen there to-night will be one of the most resplendant ever witnessed. The floor space for dancing was never before equalled in Louisville, it being twice that afforded by the Horse Show building. Everything has been arranged for the convenience and pleasure of the invited guests, and it will be an event in Louisville long to be remembered.

Lewis Y. Johnson, assistant to Robt. E. Hughes, director general, said last night that a place had been arranged in Center street, the first door north of Walnut street, for a carriage entrance. It is expected that there will be an unprecedented rush of carriages, cabs and other vehicles. Chaperons will enter the Armory from Center street, the second door north of Walnut street. The maids of honor to the Queen and Satellites will enter at the third door north of Walnut street, opening onto Center street.

SUMMARY ACTION

MAY BE TAKEN AGAINST INSURANCE COMPANIES.

California Official Makes Threat of Summary Revocation of License.

San Francisco, June 14.—The officials of California are agreed, it is said, that the insurance companies which refuse to meet their obligations and pay their losses in full will not only be driven from the State, but ruined before the world if the widest publication of their methods can accomplish that end. Insurance Commissioner E. Marion Wolf is backed by Attorney General Webb. The Attorney General expressed himself forcefully to-day regarding the proposition made by sixty companies at the meeting in Oakland Tuesday to pay only 75 per cent. of adjusted losses.

"Under the law of California," he said, "the State Insurance Commission may summarily revoke the license of any insurance company for the State when there is cause. Certainly the payment of only 75 per cent. of losses would be cause. And not only would it be proof of unsoundness and unfitness to do business, but it would be the plainest evidence of dishonesty."

Thirty-two insurance companies met in Oakland to-day and organized to be independent of the fire underwriters' bureau. These companies are the ones that decided to pay dollar for dollar their losses in the fire.

None of the companies that voted for a horizontal cut of 25 per cent. was admitted to the meeting and the result is a virtual disruption of the underwriters' bureau.

SPEAKER RISES IN SELF-DEFENSE

Resents Insinuations of Undue Influences.

House Adopts Conference Report On Statehood.

Series of Dramatic and Turbulent Scenes.

AN OVATION TO "UNCLE JOE."

Washington, June 14.—After eliminating the appropriation of $100,000 for further gauging the waters of the United States, under the direction of the Geological Survey, the House to-day grew weary of economy and increased the appropriations for further tests of structural materials, lignites and other coals, although the Appropriations Committee labored zealously to retain the appropriations at the original figure.

Not in years has the House witnessed a more dramatic scene than it witnessed to-day, ingident to the adoption of the conference report on statehood.

At the close of a wearisome day's debate, Mr. Hamilton, of Michigan, chairman of the Committee on Territories, called up the conference report. In anticipation of something unusual, most of the members were in their seats, while the galleries were comfortably filled.

* * *

Cheers For Chairman.

A round of cheers from both sides of the chamber greeted the chairman of the committee when he moved the adoption of the report. Earlier in the day he had endeavored to call up the report, but found the papers had not reached the House from the Senate. While there was no discussion on the report itself, a most unexpected episode ensued.

Mr. Moon, of Tennessee, the ranking member of the minority on the Committee on Territories, had made a statement in relation to the position of the Democrats as to the compromise which had been agreed upon in conference. He was frequently interrupted with applause, and was then followed by Marcus A. Smith, the delegate from Arizona, who took occasion in a guarded way to insinuate that there had been undue influence used in postponing an agreement. Smarting under what he believed to be a direct insinuation against him, Speaker Cannon impetuously left the chair, calling Mr. Dalzell to the desk, and taking a position unconsciously in the aisle opposite the seat which he occupied for many years until chosen Speaker, he asked the Speaker pro tem. for five minutes to explain his position. Thunders of applause greeted the Speaker as he stood, with hand uplifted, his head shaking, waiting for quiet in the House. Again and again waves of applause swept over the chamber, Democrats and Republicans participating.

* * *

The Speaker Explains.

Finally order was restored and then, measuring every word, Speaker Cannon said:

"Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House of Representatives during this session, as at all other sessions, I have represented my constituents and acted for the whole people according to my best judgment. The coming into the Union of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory meets my approval. If I had my voice and were supreme I would infinitely prefer to see Oklahoma and the Indian Territory come separately with an aggregate population of two and one-half millions, with four Senator, rather than to see New Mexico and Arizona come together, and God knows rather than to see them come singly with about 300,000 population, with four Senators.

"It is no secret as to my views as a Representative. I have sought to the best of my belief to voice my views. You have the result before you. Although every man in the Indian Territory should vote against statehood for the newly proposed State of Oklahoma, notwithstanding that protest a State would be and will be formed under this enabling act."

* * *

Vigorous Defense.

Mr. Smith, of Arizona, arose.

Mr. Cannon: "I do not yield at this moment. There is no separate vote there. There is a separate vote, however, as to the other two. So much for that. I do not propose to go into the merits of this proposition. I would not have taken the floor had not the honorable gentleman, the delegate from Arizona (Mr. Smith), made the remark that there was a high penalty for the Governor of that Territory to attempt to influence legislation or for one legislative body or its membership to attempt to traffic in the legislation with the other in order to secure other legislation, if I correctly state him.

"That remark could not have had but one motive and one meaning, and that meaning that some one in the House had sought to affect legislation in the

MEDICAL OPINIONS OF

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Experience "Fully Demonstrates the Value of Buffalo Lithia Water as a Solvent of Uric Acid, and a Valuable Therapeutic Agent in the Treatment of Gout."

L. H. Warner, A. M., Ph. G., M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. In a paper entitled "The Treatment of Gout, Uric Acid Diathesis and super-induced Cystitis in the cases of two idiosyncratic Patients," gives full clinical notes of these interesting cases, and in a lecture before the recent meeting of the Alabama Medical Association showed stereopticon views of the blood and urine of these patients in different stages of improvement. He says: "My former good results from the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in cases of Rheumatism due to Uric Acid intoxication led me to suggest this agent to my patients. The use of nitrogenous foods was restricted and a full half gallon of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER per day was ordered to be taken. I was more than surprised at the amount of Uric Acid sand eliminated with each urination, and three weeks from the beginning of treatment not a trace of the former cystitis existed, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as the only medication used, we find and in four months, with an increase of 5% Haemoglobin, 200,000 red cells and a normal count of white cells, while the urine appears without any pathological factors. These cases fully demonstrate the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as a solvent of Uric Acid and a value of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER valuable therapeutic agent in the treatment of Gout."

"THE MOST RELIABLE SOLVENT IN CHRONIC INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER AND RENAL CALCULI."

Louis C. Horn, M. D., Ph. D., Professor of Diseases of Children and Dermatology in Baltimore University, in my practice in city, writes: "Having used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER the past eight or nine years, I find it the most pleasant and most reliable solvent in Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder and Renal Calculi; also in gouty and rheumatic conditions. It is a remedy of great potency."

"UNDER A DEBT OF GRATITUDE TO THIS MOST EXCELLENT WATER FOR WONDERFUL RELIEF."

Wm. C. Wile, A.M., M.D., LL.D., of Danbury, Conn., reports the following (New England Medical Monthly, December 15, 1888): "In a recent outbreak of Nephritic Colic in our own person, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER was speedily cut the attack, under the short, the stones quickly passed, and the debris which followed showed a thorough cleaning of the kidneys and bladder of all foreign substances. All of the reflex symptoms and sequelæ were promptly relieved, and we feel under a deep debt of gratitude to this most excellent Water for wonderful relief."

House as a matter of traffic in order to secure action upon this matter in the Senate. The imputation, implied so far as it reflects upon the Speaker of this House, and so far as I know, or believe, upon any other member of this House, is unworthy of the gentleman that uttered it, and without foundation in fact (loud applause).

"If it were necessary to furnish proof of this statement, I look about me here on my own side of the House, on members with whom I disagreed touching the progress of this bill from time to time and upon that side of the House, and I pause and invite any member present who has the least intimation or knowledge or even belief that the statement implied in the insinuation of the gentleman is true to say so."

Uproar In House.

When Speaker Cannon finished the House was in an uproar. It could not be controlled, nor did the presiding officer make any effort toward controlling it. Members who had sat in silence during the delivery of the speech, Democrats and Republicans alike, crowded around the Speaker to shake him by the hand and tell him how glad they were that the long drawn out fight for Statehood had been happily ended in a compromise and that his speech voiced the sentiment of the members.

The conference report on the Omnibus Lighthouse Bill was adopted. The report of the conferees of the Agricultural Appropriation Bill was submitted and at 5:20 the House adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

SEA-LEVEL CANAL BILL.

Senate Decides To Take Vote On Next Thursday.

The Senate to-day decided to vote next Thursday on the Panama Sea Level Canal Bill; accepted the conference reports on the Diplomatic and Naval Appropriation Bills, the former complete and the latter partial; passed a bill limiting the liability that may be assumed by individuals to national banks; adopted Senator Morgan's resolution relative to the control of the Panama railroad; admitted A. M. Benson as the successor of Senator Burton, of Kansas; received the credentials of Senator du Pont, of Delaware; listened to a speech by Senator Dryden in support of a lock canal across the Isthmus of Panama, and also passed several bills of semi-private character.

In connection with the agreement to vote on the canal bill, Senator Foraker raised the point that the Senate is not sufficiently informed on the question of the type of canal to vote this session, and a sharp debate ensued, but in the end no one raised objection and the date was determined on. The Senate adjourned at 6:20 p. m.

K. U. COMPLIES WITH MR. CARNEGIE'S TERMS.

WILL ACCORDINGLY SECURE FINE NEW BUILDING.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE AT ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT.

CLOSE OF SPLENDID YEAR.

Lexington, Ky., June 14.—[Special.]—The one hundred and seventh annual commencement of the College of Liberal Art, of Kentucky University, was held to-day and during the services the secretary of the university, Walter White, aroused much enthusiasm by the announcement that the condition on which Andrew Carnegie will give $25,000 to the university for the erection of a new science building had been complied with. The condition was that the university should raise an equal amount, and so the new $50,000 building will soon be constructed. President Jenkins stated that Mr. Carnegie would be asked for an additional $10,000 for a heating plant.

After the invocation Clinton M. Harbison delivered the salutatory address, then James E. Ament, president of the Missouri State Normal School, addressed the graduating class. After President Ament's address, President Jenkins announced the result of the literary contests conducted by the Transylvanian, which are as follows: The prize of $25, given by R. M. Talbot, of Paris, Ky., for the best short story, was won by Mrs. Louise Marse Dodge. The second prize of $10, given by Col. John R. Allen, was won by D. E. Hurst. The first and second prizes of $20 and $15 for the best poems were both won by P. D. McCallum.

President Jenkins then introduced Breckinridge Jones, vice president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Jones read an interesting paper, giving the early history of the university, a short sketch of his own student life in that institution, and ended with a strong plea for uniting some of the small Kentucky colleges, especially Kentucky University and Kentucky State College, into one grand State university. President Jenkins then conferred upon President James E. Ament the degree of LL. D., and upon the graduates the various degrees for which they were candidates, with the exception of J. R. Farris, who, owing to illness, yet lacked a few weeks' work. The valedictory address was delivered by Miss Rosa May Starratt, the first young woman to win the valedictory for many years. The honor graduates, who had obtained an average of not less than 90 and were granted baccalaureate degrees, were as follows: Rosa May Starratt, Clinton McCarty Harbison, Nell Whaley, all of Kentucky. The other graduates who were granted degrees were as follows: Master of Arts, Lee Everrett Lakin, Missouri; Bachelor of Arts, Homer W. Carpenter, Sarah A. Collis, J. R. Farris, Clinton McCarty Harbison, Roy I. Neal, Samuel H. Nickel, Everett St. Clair Smith, Rosa May Starratt, Nell Whaley, all of Kentucky.

After the exercises at the college a banquet was given in the gymnasium to the alumni, at which responses were made to the following toasts: Alumni, Hugh McLellan, Richmond; Wanted, a Man, the Rev. Carey E. Morgan, Paris; The State College, Prof. John T. Faig; The Senior Class, Homer W. Carpenter; Around the World and Back to K. U., Maj. George B. Duncan.

Than Ever At the Nazareth Commencement.

A PROGRAMME OF MORE THAN ORDINARY MERIT.

FINE COMPETITION BY GRADUATES FOR HONORS.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO SCHOOL.

Nazareth, Ky., June 14.—[Special.]—For nearly a century the commencement exercises of Nazareth Academy have been one of the important annual events of Nelson county, Kentucky, and this morning a special train from Louisville took out to the beautiful grounds of the famous school a large number of the pupils' friends and relatives, many of whom, on account of Home-coming Week, came this year from the far South. The people of Nelson and neighboring counties assembled in great numbers at an early hour on the broad campus.

Because the audience assembles from a long distance the Nazareth commencement is always an elaborate affair, differing in tone and general excellence from the usual school exercises. The entrance march of the one hundred and twenty pupils opened the programme. This was followed by an overture by an orchestra of twenty-eight instruments, violins, guitars, pianos and cornets. An eight-hand piano number was very effectively played, also the De Beriot Fantasie with Miss Geraldine Henderson, of Chattanooga, at the piano and Miss Marcella Ford, violin. A vocal trio, a Lizst Rhapsodie for four pianos, a cornet solo and a polonaise for four pianos, an excellent chorus, Haydn's "The Heavens are Telling" completed the musical portion of the programme, which was of a high order in selection and rendition.

The chief number of the programme was the customary operetta which as usual reflected credit on the literary and elocutionary abilities of the graduates, who both composed and presented it. "An Imaginary Tour in the footsteps of Shakespeare" was the subject. Charming songs and tableaux illustrated it very effectively. The graduates' recitations from Shakespeare were given in excellent voice and interpretation.

* * *

Contention Song.

Among the most enjoyable of these songs and tableaux was the contention song between two groups of little girls representing the little Lapps, who were dressed in little white robes, peaked caps and shoes, and the little Japs, in Japanese costume, carrying fans and parasols. The Alps, the Banks and Braes, and Venice were among the tableaux. The operetta was concluded with the "Old Kentucky Home" chorus, appropriate to the celebrations of the week in Kentucky. The valedictory was sung by the graduates. Father Cronin made the closing remarks and crowned the graduates. The absence of Bishop McCloskey was deeply lamented.

In the distribution of honors, graduating crowns and diplomas were conferred upon Misses Marcella Ford, Agnes Clarke, Myra Herron, Rebecca Johnson, Jennie Spalding, Margaret McKenna, Mary Tyler Brooks, Geraldine Henderson, Ruby Crutcher, Ethel Wathen, Marguerite Moore, Margaret Walsh.

A gold medal for amiability and exemplary conduct was awarded to Miss Geraldine Henderson.

* * *

Honors For These.

A gold medal for the senior department was drawn for by Misses Mary T. Brooks, Margaret McKenna, Marguerite Moore, Margaret Walsh, Ethel Wathen, Nellie Putnam, Kate Boldrick, Marcella Ford, Myra Herron, Loretto Cocoran; that in the junior department was won by Miss Vernon Fletcher. Testimonials were bestowed on twenty-eight pupils, and second literary honors on the twelve young ladies who will graduate next year. Misses Mary Montgomery, Martha Sproull, Beatrice Rodman, Nellie Putnam, Ida C. Carroll, Nellie Malone, Eva Buchanan, Anna May Cothran, Lillie Kearns, Kate Boldrick, Austine Brooks, Loretto Corcoran.

Among the audience at the exercises this year were the Rev. H. Brady, the Rev. C. O'Connell, the Very Rev. J. P. Cronin, the Rev. T. V. Tobin, the Rev. M. McDonald, the Very Rev. William P. Hogarty, Fathers A. Brady, J. Pieters, T. White, J. O'Connor, D. Murphy, J. O'Connor, J. O'Connor, P. Guerin, Michael Jaglowig, C. R.; C. Raffo, D. Crahe, T. Hayes, R. THIS COMMITTEE SAYS PACKING PLANTS ARE NICE.

Chicago, June 14.—The Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers appointed to make an examination of the packing establishments at the Union Stockyards had completed its work and will submit its report to the National Association to-morrow. The committee in summing up decided that the reports which had gone out regarding the packing establishments has been grossly exaggerated and that a great injustice had been done, as well as an irreparable damage to the greatest industry of the country. Also that while many details of a trivial nature might be improved upon, the general conditions involving sanitary, general cleanliness and a production of wholesome food were far better than the average hotel kitchen or even the kitchens of a large percentage of private residences and largely superior to conditions found in a large per cent. of the smaller markets in city and country.

LOCK CANAL

Seems Now To Be Probable Selection.

TWO HOUSES OF CONGRESS SEE THINGS DIFFERENTLY.

CROMWELL MUST ANSWER SENATOR MORAGN'S QUESTIONS.

EXCUSE FOR GETTING DRUNK.

Washington, June 14.—[Special.]—The canal situation seems to be simply a question of the manner in which the House shall express itself against the sea-level proposition, which the Senate expected to pass. With possibly three exceptions the members of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which the bill will be referred in the House, are in favor of a lock canal. Members of this committee assert also that there is a majority in the House holding the same opinion.

Chairman Hepburn, and also many members of his committee, contend that if no law is passed prescribing the type of canal to be built the President will have no alternative but to go ahead with the construction of a lock canal. To sustain this contention the committee has referred to the fact that in deciding to build the canal at Panama Congress acted on the report of the Walker Commission, which was that an eighty-five-foot lock canal could be built at Panama for $145,000,000. This act, known as the Spooner act, appropriated $10,000,000 and authorized the President to begin construction. Since then additional appropriations have been made, with no change in the legislated plan.

With this in view it is held that should the Senate bill be reported from the House committee with the recommendation that it lie on the table, thereby killing it, no change would be made in the present law, and the President would have no alternative but to continue the construction of a lock canal. This course is the one now most likely to be taken, although the House might be forced by the Senate to take a direct vote on the question should the Senate see fit to force matters by placing the sea-level proposition as rider on the Sundry Civil Bill.

May Not Become Law.

It is not sure that the Public Building Bill, better known as the "Pork Bill," will become a law at this session of Congress. The leaders are now talking of letting it go over until the winter session. Their idea is to let it pass the House and hang it up in the Senate. The bill will be reported to the House the first of next week with a special rule cutting off all amendments.

The "Housewife."

A contract has been let to a New York firm for furnishing eventually something like 50,000 articles known as "housewife," to be carried by every soldier in the army when in the field. For some time army officers have been obtaining samples of this article with the idea of having something selected which answers all the purposes. The one which has been selected is made of khaki cloth, weighing a trifle more than four ounces. It will contain scissors, buttons, needles, thread and an assortment of pins. The Government will pay about thirty-six cents for each "housewife." The idea comes from the Japanese army.

Cromwell Must Answer.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, has finally won his fight in the committee to make the pompous Cromwell answer courteous and pertinent questions. If the Panama promoter still refuses to reply the Senate may find some way to punish him for contempt.

Admits He Expects Losses.

In an interview printed in the New York Tribune to-day, Representative Watson, of Indiana, the Republican "whip" of the House, admits the loss of forty-some Republican Congressmen in the next House. According to Mr. Watson, he "counts" but does not "concede" that his party will lose this number. Even with this loss, Mr. Watson believes he will still have a Republican majority of about thirty.. One of the districts Mr. Watson is counting upon losing is the Ninth Kentucky, now represented by Representative Bennett.

FLORAL PARADE.

Everything Is Ready For Gorgeous Pageant.

MUCH CREDIT WILL BE DUE SCHOOL CHILDREN.

SCHEDULED TO MOVE AT 10 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IN LINE.

The floral parade, consisting of nine divisions, will begin to move at 10 o'clock this morning. The parade will form at Eighth and Main streets, and cover a route four miles in length. In beauty it is expected that it will exceed anything of a similar nature ever before given in Louisville. It will be headed by policemen in automobiles, followed by a platoon of mounted policemen. Every vehicle, except that to be occupied by Miss Louise Lee Hardin, will be elaborately decorated. The carriage in which Miss Hardin is to appear will be void of decorations as a mark of distinction to her. She will ride in a private equipage, the property of J. L. Smyzer.

"To the school children of Louisville will be due the major portion of credit for the success of the floral parade," said John M. Borntraeger, of the Floral Parade Committee, yesterday afternoon. "They have worked heart and soul for the success of the parade ever since it was first suggested. Several thousand school children will take part. The maids of honor are largely composed of High School and ward school girls. The queen will be a High School girl. The public schools of Louisville will have in line several floats."

* * *

Fire Department Display.

Mrs. Fillmore Tyson, wife of the Chief of the Louisville Fire Department, will appear in the Fire Department display, driving her own horse. There will be band after band of music, the old veteran volunteer Fire Department of Louisville will be represented, and hundreds of private equipages, all gorgeously decorated, will be in line. The parade will present one beautiful panorama.

Three judges for each division, the identity of whom has not been divulged, will be stationed along the line of march. These judges will view the parade from different vantage points in order that they may not miss a feature of a single display, enabling them in the end to hand down fair and unbiased decisions. They will make their report to George H. Wilson, chairman of the Floral Parade Committee, and he will later announce the names of the prize winners.

Mr. Borntraeger announced yesterday afternoon that all those desiring to compete for prizes in the parade must be in line in the places assigned them at the time of starting, 10 o'clock this morning. Those who report later will be allowed to drop in line in the rear of the parade, but they will not be considered in the award of prizes. It was positively announced that the parade would start at 10 o'clock, even though there are not more than ten displays in line at that time.

All assistant marshals will assemble at Eighth street and Broadway at 8:45 o'clock, where they will report to Mr. Borntraeger. All aides will report to the assistant marshals at 9 o'clock at the respective places of formation of the different divisions. All persons with entries will report to their respective divisions at 9:15 o'clock and take their places in line. Aides on the personal staff of the marshal will report to Maj. John H. Leathers at the Armory at 9:15 o'clock.

* * *

Order of Divisions.

The order of divisions will be as follows:

First Division—Headed by police in automobiles, Garnett Zorn, assistant marshal, and automobile runabouts.

Second Division—Headed by Assistant Marshal Longest, and light touring cars.

Third Division — Headed by Ira S. Barnett, assistant marshal, and heavy touring cars.

Fourth Division — Mounted police, George H. Wilson, marshal; Maj. John H. Leathers, chief of staff; John M. Borntraeger, assistant chief of staff; John M. Wilson, of Williamstown, N. Y., heading a band of thirty pieces; Charles Crush, assistant marshal, heading the Louisville Light Infantry, which will guard the Queen's float, which is to have an escort of mounted ladies; Miss Louise Lee Hardin and friend in a private carriage, with a special escort.

Fifth Division—J. N. Gathright, assistant marshal; band and one-horse vehicles.

Sixth Division—Capt. Neville S. Bullitt, assistant marshal; band and pony carts.

Seventh Division—Smith Bailey, assistant marshal; band and school floats.

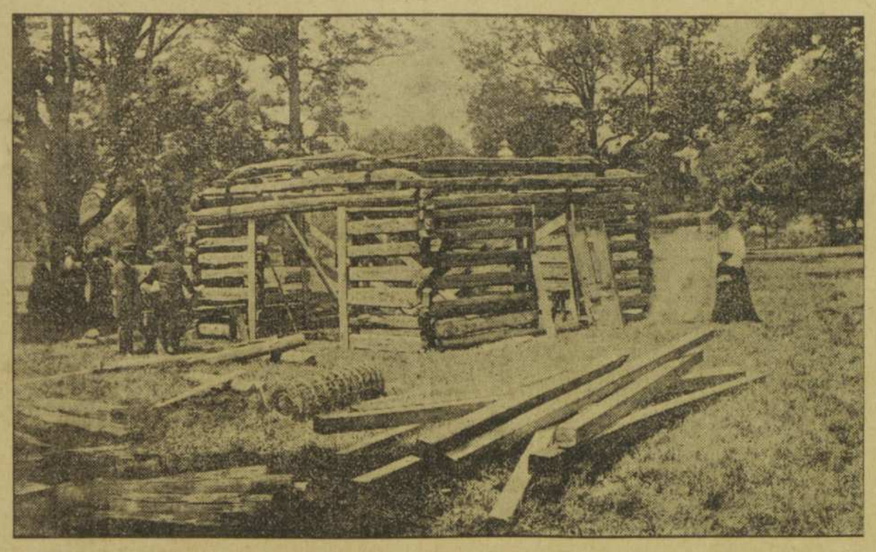
Eighth Division — Clarence J. Hellman; assistant marshal; band and special floats.

Ninth Division—Capt. Henry Weatherford, assistant marshal; band, volunteer veteran fire department, Louisville fire department.

After forming at Eighth and Main streets, the parade will march east on Main street to Brook street, south on Brook street to Market street, east on Market street to Jackson street, south on Jackson street to Broadway, west on Broadway to First street, north on First street to Market street, west on Market street to Seventh street, south on Seventh street to Jefferson street (via reviewing stand) to Third avenue, south on Third avenue to Hill street, west on Hill street to St. James Court, and thence to Central Park, where the parade will be disbanded.

The services at Central Park will consist of crowning the Queen, music and speechmaking.

Lincoln's Cabin Attracts Visitors To Central Park.



Thousands of people, residents of Louisville and Home Comers from the world at large, have traveled to Central Park to take a look at the log cabin home of the youthful Abraham Lincoln. So much interest is taken in the cabin that it is necessary to set a guard about it to prevent the visitors from chipping off portions as relics. The cabin will be on exhibition all this week and will then be returned to New York.

KENTUCKIANS PAY TRIBUTE TO STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER

seat, raised his trembling arm high in air and reverently declared:

Worth Coming For.

"My God! That song alone was worth coming all the way back."

That expressed the feeling of all. It had been a remarkable spectacle and one that left an undying impression upon every person within the sound of the song. With feelings repressed the audience finally became quiet again and the exercises were continued.

Next came the oration of R. W. Miller, of Richmond, and the rich power of his pleasing voice, combined with the touching sentiment he expounded, gave surcease to the happy grief of a few moments before. Mr. Miller talked on "Kentuckians at Home," and extolled the virtues of the people of Kentucky in an admirable manner. He, too, received enthusiastic applause.

Unveils Statue of Her Father.

Then came the principal event of the afternoon. After a short introduction Mrs. Marion Foster Welsh, of Allegheny, Pa., the only daughter of Stephen Collins Foster, approached the front of the platform and released the ribbon that held the veiling of her father's statue in place. Too full of emotion for an expression of her feelings, Mrs. Welsh only bowed to the cheering concourse and then returned to her seat. At sight of the clay model, an excellent piece of work made by J. L. Roop, the sculptor, another enthusiastic outburst came.

Following came the address on "Kentuckians Abroad" by Jerry South, of Mountain Home, Ark. With a voice powerful enough to reach all parts of the big hall, Mr. South delivered a masterful eulogy upon the State of his nativity, and then he recounted the myriad of native Kentuckians who had gone forth into the world and made names for themselves in every line of human endeavor. His address elicited unstinted applause.

After Mr. South's speech J. Victor Foster, of Fulton, N. Y., a nephew of Stephen Collins Foster, sang "My Old Kentucky Home," and again the applause was unbounded. With a low, rich voice, he sang the words of his great relative's grand song in an admirable manner. Then the old piece was heard again, hen Louis R. Schwenck, of Lousville, played the air upon the flute that was once the property of Foster, and upon which "My Old Kentucky Home" is said to have been played first. With the benediction of the Rev. Dr. W. W. Hamilton the exercises were concluded.

UNVEIL THE STATUE.

Impressive Ceremony In Honor of Song Writer's Memory.

With song and story the clay model of the Stephen Collins Foster statue was unveiled at the Armory yesterday afternoon. At least 20,000 persons were in attendance and to every detail of the exercises the closest attention was given. After the invocation by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Powell, the address of welcome on behalf of the school children and school authorities of Louisville was made by Prof. E. H. Mark, superintendent of the Louisville public schools. Prof. Mark's address was brief and he referred only to the pleasure it was to all Louisville people to be able to entertain the Home Comers.

Mrs. Jessie Bowman Webb, a former Indiana girl, but filled with the Kentucky spirit of the occasion, sang "Old Black Joe," and responded to the encore that followed with "Dixie." Following this the chorus of 1,000 voices from the public schools sang "Old Folks at Home," to the accompaniment of the Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Carl Schmidt, and led by Mrs. Webb.

* * *

Mr. Miller's Address.

Then came the first address of the day, by R. W. Miller, of Richmond, who spoke as follows.

* * *

R. W. Miller At Foster Day.

"The sun shines bright in the Old Kentucky Home," and in the fruitful richness of a radiant June, when, from every section of this imperial republic, the sometime gone, but always loved and unforgotten, wanderers are gathered home again, it is fitting, that called into being by the generous contributions of the children of the public schools, the little ones, whose laughter makes home bright, and whose abiding love fills this mortal life with more than mortal beauty, there should be dedicated a stately statue to the memory of the man whose gentle genius caught the spirit of the Commonwealth and gave its noblest sentiment enduring sweetness in the lingering melody of a deathless song.

I have no sort of sympathy with the philosophy of Diogenes, which goes up and down this good world, lifting its smoking lantern upon the poor weakness and wretched failure here and there, losing sight of splendid progress and sublime achievement, everywhere bearing voiceful witness to man's kinship with heaven. The songs that are immortal, the thoughts which linger to inspire, the deeds whose fragrance abides in benediction are those which speak of courage, of truth, of love, and righteousness, lengthening the horizon of human hope and enlarging all life's limitations.

What a Song Can Do.

At the first note of the "Marsellaise" the Frenchman straightens for the charge. Amid the solemn cadences of "God Save the King" the Englishman bows to the accumulated reverence of centuries; at the swelling rhythm of the "Star Spangled Banner" the eyes grow misty in the recollections of a patriot's longing for the dawn, and we salute the flag that carries a nation's history and is resplendent with the glory of its hopes; "Yankee Doodle" stimulates and "Dixie" stirs to madness, but one song, "My Old Kentucky Home," alone has power to soothe the restless pulse of care, and it comes like the benediction that follows after prayer. It voices a sentiment, it speaks a message, it stirs the deep wells of the heart as nothing else has power to do.

It conjures visions of a rich and radiant land stretching out from swelling waves of rivers roll to the towering beauty of the mountains' power; of tableland, where life runs sweet and all that's fair and pure and good makes ministrations unto man; of spreading fields; of stately trees; of waving grain; of verdant green; of matchless grass; of cattle feeding on a thousand hills; of woman's beauty and of manhood's strength; of stately homes, gleaming white through avenues of trailing trees—the center of a people's life, because all this is the center of a people's love; of a unique and strangely wrought civilization, presenting the peculiar commingling of Feudal tradition and Democratic history.

It voices the impulse of the heart, it speaks of firesides and of household gods. Its music has enriched the world. Love hums it in a whisper above the swinging cradle, where the smile of sleeping childhood bears witness that in dreams it sees the angels passing; on blood-stained fields where moving armies thirst for blood, it has purged the heart of hate. In crowded cities heaving with thirsty lust and greed for gold; in the waste places of the earth; in the glory of the morning's light; in the fading splendors of purple twilight; at home, abroad, in places familiar to the feet of man and in the distant islands of the sunkissed seas, we hear it, and always and everywhere the eyes grow misty in the shade of unshed tears, and the heart beats stronger and true, responsive to the conscious call of home.

* * *

Tardy, But Devoted Justice.

So it is fitting that to-day, when joyous, whole-souled welcome makes glad the pulsing heart of countless thousands, there should be here unveiled, tardy, but devoted justice, a statue to the memory of Stephen Collins Foster.

Kentucky has lost less of its kinship with the past than any other of the five and forty Commonwealths which unitedly severs and concentrated lights have led the world to freedom. Within her borders life's conditions have been little changed. With singular devotion her people have held to the old ideals, and the natural continuity of her destiny has not once been broken.

Cavalier and Puritan have mingled blood and neither type is longer local; Huguenot and Scotch Irish have gone through the crucible together and fused the best characteristics of each; Catholic and Covenanter have forgotten the bitterness and rancor of the other older days in a common zeal for souls. Johnstown is swept out with the rush of a flood; Jacksonville feels the breath of killing pestilence, Galveston surrenders to the sea, San Francisco trembles into smoking ruins—one touch of nature makes the whole world kin, and the noblest and best exhibition of our oneness are given to the world. There is no North nor South nor East nor West, but one flag, one country and one destiny.

* * *

All Is Peace.

Peace and plenty smile upon a happy, a contented and a prosperous people. Science has harnessed nature to the service of humanity; art has been led captive to human comfort; material blessings have been showered about us; thought receives its recompense and labor has its honest wage; intelligence is multiplied; education is universal; and thus with peace prevalent, the law supreme and liberty regnant, in the conscious courage of a deathless hope, we journey to a future beyond the reach of vision, saying to one another, as simply and as truly as it was said more than three thousand years ago, in that far off meadow by the margin of a mystic sea, "Whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge, thy people shall be my people and thy God shall be my God."

Whilst all of this is true, in some strange way, the Kentuckian has always preserved his individuality, has never lost his identity, and we love to look upon him as a Saul among his brethren, so marked by physical, racial and temperamental characteristics that you may mark him among a thousand. There must be reason for it, and I think that in his history we will find the causes that differentiate him from the most of men.

* * *

Why He Is Great.

Roll back the curtain which separates the things that are from the things that have been, and a great procession goes trooping by—a procession whose visions move the heart and stir the soul, and stimulate to high endeavor. From older settlements, across the hills, a dauntless company starts out and strikes into a trackless wilderness, to fix anew, within an unknown land, the outposts of civilization. It winds its way through the Gap along what afterwards became the Old Wilderness Road, until entranced by beauty more than human, it bivouacked by the Hudson of the West, and lighted the first campfires in the Dark and Bloody Ground, and reared the old stockade at Boonesboro. There brave and heroic men and still braver and more heroic women claimed a wilderness for civilization and won, through sacrifice and suffering, in blood and agony and travail, a sylvan paradise for peace. The company from beyond the Alleghenies grew, and with dauntless courage and consistent effort, in places, long since overgrown and near forgotten, they laid broad and deep the foundations of a free and independent State.

In all of the glorious annals of our dominant and dauntless race, there is no more inspiring page. It was a new experiment. It was the first settlement in human history which felt the touch of older settlements and hurled itself across the mountains, 300 miles from the next outpost of civilization. It was a conspicuous success. It produced a society and developed a civilization as unique as they are winsome and attractive, in the hardships, toil and dangers, in the sympathy, the succor and success, in the splendid isolation of earlier days which only men with iron in their blood were fitted to endure, we find the reason for that strong, strange love of home and home life; that sturdy, stalwart, almost reckless independence; the self-reliance, the poise, the splendid courage, the conscious power, the love of right, the hate of wrong, that marks the Kentuckian everywhere, and makes him leader of his kind.

This was the man who made up that intrepid band, which caught the fire of Clark's magnetic genius and went through snow and ice, through hardships beyond speech and difficulties that immortalized endurance, to add the Northwestern Empire to the Republic. It was men grown out of such stock who, with prescient statesmanship, "dipped into the future far as human eye could see, caught the wonders of the world and the glories yet to be," read the unborn future, and blazed the way to the free navigation of the Mississippi and the inevitable acquisition of the Louisiana territory. Their rifles won the battle of New Orleans, and their rich red blood, freely shed, was the precious incense through whose smoke Texas was added to the stars. In the great conflict of '61, divided between allegiance and love, some went to each army, and wherever they marched or fought or died, they bore themselves as men. And when the shock of strife was over, the Commonwealth they loved was the first of all States to blot from her statute books every law born of the hate of war, and opened wide her arms and bade her children come home again.

And so the wounds and all that's fair and pure and good makes ministrations unto man; of spreading fields; of stately trees; of waving grain; of verdant green; of matchless grass; of cattle feeding on a thousand hills; of woman's beauty and of manhood's strength; of stately homes, gleaming white through avenues of trailing trees—the center of a people's life, because all this is the center of a people's love; of a unique and strangely wrought civilization, presenting the peculiar commingling of Feudal tradition and Democratic history.

It voices the impulse of the heart, it speaks of firesides and of household gods. Its music has enriched the world. Love hums it in a whisper above the swinging cradle, where the smile of sleeping childhood bears witness that in dreams it sees the angels passing; on blood-stained fields where moving armies thirst for blood, it has purged the heart of hate. In crowded cities heaving with thirsty lust and greed for gold; in the waste places of the earth; in the glory of the morning's light; in the fading splendors of purple twilight; at home, abroad, in places familiar to the feet of man and in the distant islands of the sun-kissed seas, we hear it, and always and everywhere the eyes grow misty in the shade of unshed tears, and the heart beats stronger and true, responsive to the conscious call of home.

Close To Nature.

This is the history, lingering like an inspiration; this the environment, of which the Kentuckian has wrought his destiny at home. The currents of the larger world have often passed him by. Immigration has made small impress on either his character or stock. Living close to nature, stimulated by the soil's strong touch, building home and loving it, not given to large accumulation, drinking the sweetness of the simple life, he has preserved at once his independence and his high ideals. Proud of his Commonwealth, jealous of his honor, quick of temper, but quicker to forgive; free from envy, malice, hate, strangely free from polluting the touch of that sordid commercialism which, in the avarice of graceless greed, multiplies riches in the sweat of unremunerated labor and gathers wealth through the sufferings of unrequited toil, loving justice, doing equity, building on the conservatism of an established law, he has kept the faith as it came down from the father.

To-day, well across the threshold of a century for the sweep of whose enlarging visions the past affords no measure, this Commonwealth founded in faith and builded in courage, faces a radiant morning, big with promise, bright with hope. It is a very precious privilege to be called to the kingdom for such a time—to be privileged to participate in the great movements that make for a broader and nobler material development, a more abundant and abiding destiny, a richer life, and a deeper patriotic purpose, for loftier standards of public and of private life, for sterner tests of personal and corporate honesty, for civic righteousness and truth and justice regnant and supreme.

* * *

Kentucky's Pledge.

And here to-day, in the hallowed associations of these happy scenes, recalling radiant days that were and glorious days ahead, as we gather from the corners of the earth in loving communion in a place that will always be to all of us a common home, the Kentuckian at home gives you this pledge, that burying all the bitterness and rancor of the other older days—if bitterness and rancor there have been—forgetting all that has been unjust, forgiving all that has been unkind—if any such has been—not in anger nor in strife, not in discord or confusion, freed of faction and purged of selfish purpose, in a spirit of high devotion, with deep convictions and unfaltering faith, looking always up and never down, constructing, not destroying, in love and fellowship and fraternity, we lay the honest and unselfish service of loyal and devoted hearts and lives on the common altar of our common faith, as we set the new Kentucky forward on her endless journey along a luminous highway, leading to a destiny beyond the reach of vision, within the providence of God.

* * *

Following Mr. Miller's address was the unveiling ceremony by Mrs. Marion Foster Welsh, the only daughter of Stephen Collins Foster, the author and composer of "My Old Kentucky Home." The service was brief, Mrs. Welsh making no remarks and merely releasing the veiling.

* * *

Statue Unveiled.

The singing of Foster's great song by the chorus and audience came next and it resulted in a remarkable demonstration. Following this came the address of Jerry South, of Mountain Home, Ark., on "Kentuckians Abroad." Mr. South spoke as follows:

* * *

Love of Mother.

"Lives there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land."

From the dark pine forests along the Canadian border, from the Gulf and the Rio Grande and the trembling hills that surround the Golden Gate, have come the loyal sons and daughters of Kentucky to pay their tributes of love and fealty to the mother State;

And there have come from the North, the South and the East, and from their splendid cities, thousands of the scions of this pioneer Commonwealth to render their tributes of affection; all this magnificent multitude, summoned thither by the proclamation of the brilliant Chief Magistrate of Kentucky, whom all the world admires and honors for his zeal and patriotism.

If I were asked by the proud old mother whence came this multitude of sons and daughters, I would answer, from the halls of the Nation's counsels, from the benches of the Judges all over the land; from the inner chambers of the great financial institutions; from the colossal merchants' bazars and palaces; from every honorable walk of life and from the places of fame in the fields of literature, art and science—from wherever noble manhood and womanhood win supremacy, and fidelity and genius are crowned with success.

* * *

Why They Went Forth.

Then if I were asked why went they forth from the bosom of this gracious mother, I should reply that blood will tell and that the indomitable spirit that impelled their ancestors to subdue the savages and reclaim the wilderness had sent them still onward in search of fortune or adventure, and that like their ancestors they know no such word as fail; though I have often heard it said in the places of my sojourn that Kentucky ought to be a mighty good State, judging from the number of politicians who had left there, and some of our hospitable friends whom we left behind have told us since our return that we need not have run away, as we probably could have "stood trial and come clear."

About 140 years ago Daniel Boone, chafing under a restless spirit for adventure, crossed the Cumberland Mountains and found what he sought and loved, in the dark and bloody grounds—then from the original colonies came kindred spirits to aid him in building the most magnificent State the world has ever beheld.

But when the red man retreated toward the setting sun, and the buffalo crossed the Mississippi and the wheels of commercialism began to turn, Boone the pioneer and many of his contemporaries again plunged westward into the trackless unknown wilderness and once more blazed trails for the Anglo-Saxon civilization to follow.

So, too, have six hundred thousand descendants of these sturdy pioneers gone out from the parent State to seek adventure or fortune in every part of this broad empire of States.

If you would learn how well they have wrought in the homes of their adoption, the geographical names of innumerable cities and counties of every Western State will be valuable witnesses; and the rolls of famous men and women all over this great land will speak volumes in their behalf.

How proud these wandering prodigals are of their birthright, and how loyal to the history and traditions of old Kentucky is eloquently told by the beaming bosom, the haughty mien and sparkling eye when they proclaim their nativity and extol Kentucky's virtues.

Carson Next To Boone.

In testimony of the fact that Kentuckians have been conspicuous in the epoch-making periods of this country, I call your attention to the fact that next in importance to Boone as the advance agent of civilization was Kit Carson, the scout and frontiersman born in Madison county, Kentucky, and his fame will be scarcely less enduring than that of Boone.

When a hundred years of the march of civilization and its triumphs of education and industry that followed the paths of Boone and Carson came to be celebrated by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the honor and task of its successful fruition fell upon the shoulders of another Kentuckian, also a son of Madison county, David R. Francis. How well he acquitted himself the plaudits of all the civilized and barbaric world proclaim.

As a further evidence of the fact that Kentucky always furnishes leaders when occasion demands, we cite the fact that when the great civil strife broke over this fair land and threatened to rend it asunder, Kentucky furnished two of her native-born sons in Lincoln and Davis as the respective leaders; and she also furnished her full quota of warriors for each side of the fray.

That the soldiers of Kentucky have borne themselves upon foreign fields as became sons of Sparta, I summon the stories of the River Raisin, of Tippecanoe and the Swamps of the Thames, where Tecumseh, the greatest statesman and warrior that any savage nation ever sent to battle, forfeited his life to Col. Richard Mentor Johnson. And it was the Kentucky riflemen who hurled back the red-coated veterans of Packingham at New Orleans.

I recall with pride the bloody fields of Cerro Gordo and Buena Vista, where Santa Anna met his doom; and the imperishable monuments of stone on the bloody fields of Murfreesboro and Chickamauga mark the spots where the Orphan Brigade sacrificed Hanson and Helm to immortal fame and glory.

* * *

The Decadence.

That Kentucky character, genious and learning have been sought and honored in the past all the tombs of history tell; that they have borne the burdens ably all the world knows; and I am not among those who believe that the native stamp of character and genius or brain and brawn is in decadence.

We feel very pardonable pride in the fact that Joel T. Hart inscribed Kentucky's name first on the roll of sculpture for the last three hundred years, and as a Kentuckian I swell with emotion when I see the name of Enid Yandell stand out in bold relief as the coming greatest artist of the Twentieth century.

When I recall the name of that benefactor of womankind, Ephriam McDowell, as the greatest surgeon of his day, I am gratified that in McMurtry and Anderson our generation offers worthy successors to the illustrious Dr. McDowell.

The mantle of David Yandell rests gracefully upon the shoulders of Roberts and Vance.

Compliment For Governor.

In James B. Beck the old Commonwealth gave the nation the ablest Senator of his day, but when we contemplate the men of our own time, Kentucky need not despair of a conspicuous leader in the Senate, when discerning men's eyes rest upon the face of Gov. Beckham.

When Henry Clay said that he would rather be right than be President, he spoke an immortal sentiment, but it was no more lofty than the dying message of William Goebel of our own time when he said: "Tell my friends to live by the civil law and be loyal to the great common people."

The fame and high place won at the bar by Kentuckians through the Marshalls, Crittendens, Breckinridges and Hardins will not be lost, while William Lindsay and John G. Carlisle walk upon the earth and the bloom of youth is yet upon the cheek of Richard Miller.

While that womanly woman, Mary Anderson, lives to honor her native State, Kentucky's place in the field of drama and tragedy will be secure and we shall yet be envied by the world.

To maintain the high standard gained in literature by the production of the "Bivouac of the Dead" and the "Moneyless Man," Louisville has given us her fair daughter, Alice Hegan Rice, with her inimitable "Mrs. Wiggs."

* * *

Great Man of His Time.

When the assassin's bullet struck down William Goebel then Kentucky was bereft of the greatest statesman of our time, but fellow Kentuckians, there yet treads the earth with manly stride and giant intellect a commoner, devoted to the plain people—he is descended from Kentucky blood of the pioneer stock and the eyes of the world are fixed upon him as a man of destiny, for he is the only hope of his people and they hail his coming back to his native land as a conquering hero and the pride of his country—this man is William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska.

Ah, my friends, Kentucky has generations of greatness and glory yet in store for her, and we may well rejoice in our proud heritage, and that the blood of the pioneers still courses warm through the veins of loyal sons and daughters.

Kentucky has been good to the world and all the world has honored Kentuckians, but no matter how great the reward heaped upon them, when the fight is fought and the victory won, the loyal hearts yearn for the old Kentucky home.

As a fitting close before the benediction by the Rev. Dr. William Hamilton, J. Victor Foster, of Fulton, N. Y., a nephew of the author of "My Old Kentucky Home," sang the song, and after that it was played on the flute once the property of Stephen Collins Foster, by Louis R. Schwenck, of Louisville.

On the speaker's platform during the exercises besides Mrs. Welsh were Lieut. Gov. William P. Thorne and Mrs. Thorne; R. W. Miller and Mrs. Miller, of Richmond; Miss Louise Lee Hardin, of Denver, Colo.; Senator James B. McCreary and Mrs. McCreary, Jerry South and Mrs. South, of Mountain Home, Ark.; the Rev. Dr. W. W. Hamilton, the Rev. S. S. Waltz and the Rev. E. L. Powell, of Louisville; Sam P. Jones, Harry E. Pfingst, Prof. H. W. Bartholomew.

SCHOOL CHILDREN IN PARADE.

Pretty Girls Dressed In White Attract Much Attention.

Fresh as daisies, with smiling faces and joyous hearts, more than 1,000 school children marched in the parade yesterday, which was the first formal ceremony in the celebration of Foster Day. High School girls and ward school girls and ward school boys joined in doing honor to the memory of him whose spirit was as that of a little child, and all along the route of march the waiting throngs caught the spirit of the day and cheered the happy young paraders and cheered the band time and time again as it played the airs known the world over as the gifts of Stephen Collins Foster to humanity.

The parade formed at Third avenue and Broadway and moved at 1:30 o'clock in Third avenue to Walnut and down Walnut to the Armory and into the great hall, where the unveiling of the Foster statue took place. The line of march was headed by eight mounted policemen, consisting of Corporal Read and Officers Cooper, Bozell, Bonn, Davis, Callahan, Coons and Galway. Following the police came the Louisville Military Band under the direction of Gus Uhrig, and close behind the band, and in the position of honor, marched the girls of the High School under the special direction of Prof. W. H. Bartholomew.

Each girl was clad in white and carried a dainty Japanese parasol to ward off the midday sun and a still daintier fan to serve as a souvenir of the occasion, besides bouquets of fresh flowers. There were large girls and small girls; blonde girls and brunettes, and those that are classed in the ill-defined borders that lie between, but all were pretty and fresh and largely outnumbered the boys in the parade.

First came the seniors, twenty-five in number, and then about seventy juniors. After them, with no distinction in dress, came 100 girls of the second year and 200 of the first year classes. Aides detailed from the Home-coming headquarters marched at intervals by the side of the girls, who walked four abreast. Superintendent E. H. Mark led the school children from the ward schools of the city. Prof. Mark estimated that there were at least 1,500 pupils in the parade.

In this division came more girls in white dresses and boys in white caps and on their best behavior. Immediately behind the last class of the High School came a troop of girls from the Eighth and Seventh ward schools, then a detachment of boys from the Parkland School and others from the Normal School.

Following these came representatives from the Smyser-avenue school, the Third ward school, the Second ward school, the Cochran School, the Fifth ward school, the Kentucky-street school, the Tenth ward school, the Madison-street school, the Duncan-street school, the Atkinson School, the Columbia School and the Portland School, in the order named.

The City Hospital ambulance, with several teachers brought up the rear of the procession.

When the paraders reached the Armory the cheering throngs almost blocked the way so that it was with difficulty that an entrance into the building was effected. Once in, the long line of girls, like a white ribbon, streamed down the center aisle, while the band played "My Old Kentucky Home." At the end of the aisle and beneath the white-veiled statue of Foster, Prof Mark and the aides divided the lines, sending part to the right and part to the left by twos, and in that formation the school children mounted the platform and took the seats that had been reserved for them. Visitors and citizens alike remarked the unusual beauty and inspiring nature of the parade. Standing at Walnut street and looking out Third avenue to Broadway the effect on the onlookers was unique and dazzling.

Route of Parade.

From Sixth and Main streets, where the formation of the pageant will be made, it will proceed east on Main street to Jackson street, south on Jackson street to Market street, west on Market street to Seventh street, south on Seventh street to Jefferson street, east on Jefferson street to First street, south on First street to Broadway, west on Broadway to Fourth avenue, north on Fourth avenue to Walnut street, west on Walnut street to the Armory entrance on Center street, arriving there at 10 o'clock.

The assembly room in the northeast corner of the basement of the Armory will be reserved for the Queen, the man representing Daniel Boone, the maids of honor and court ladies, chairman of the Ball Committee, chairman of the Floor Committee, chairman of the Reception Committee, members of the Executive Committee, the Satellites of Mercury, costumers, dressers and waiters. John H. Sutcliffe, a member of the Reception Committee, will have charge of the room, which will be thrown open at 10 o'clock.

None of the attendants of the maids of honor and court ladies will be admitted to this room. Light refreshments for the satellites and other guests will be furnished by The Seelbach management.

A double column formation will be made for the grand march into the ball-room. The chairmen of the Ball and Floor Committees will lead, followed by Daniel Boone and Queen, maids of honor to the Queen, court ladies of the Queen, other maids of honor and the Satellites of Mercury.

After making a circuit of the ball-room the chairmen of the Ball and Floor Committees will separate at the head of the stairway before the throne. Daniel Boone and the Queen will proceed to the throne, the Queen to be seated, with Daniel Boone standing at her right hand. The maids of honor and court ladies are to be grouped around the throne. The other maids of honor will stand in the rear of the throne. The Satellites will occupy a platform in the rear. Later the Satellites will march to the music of Sousa's "Sound Off March" on the ball-room floor, and on their return to the throne will salute the Queen and court and disband.

Credit Due Mr. Clark.

The floats and costumes were designed by Peyton N. Clarke, chairman of the Night Pageant Committee. It required weeks of untiring and nerve-racking work. The crown which will adorn the brow of the Queen was presented to her by Mr. Clarke, to whom it was made a present during one of the Mardi Gras celebrations in New Orleans several years ago. It is studded with imitation jewels, and is said to be one of the handsomest and most costly ever used on a similar occasion.

ARMORY BEING PUT IN CONDITION FOR BALL.

REGISTRATIONS YESTERDAY.

All roads led to the Armory yesterday.

Throughout the day the big structure was one mass of people, and when the management announced at 10 o'clock last night that the drill hall must be vacated, it was with reluctance that the Home Comers left the place that has grown to be the common meeting point.

The registration of visitors yesterday at the 119 county headquarters was the heaviest of any day thus far, and at 6 o'clock the books were closed permanently. At that time no count had been made of the total number of registrations, but in Jefferson county alone it was closely estimated that 2,700 names had been recorded.

Outside of that county the registrations, of course, were not as heavy, but it was estimated that not less than 15,000 persons had visited the booths and subscribed their names on the books. This by no means represents the entire number of returned Kentuckians in Louisville, for hundreds appeared each day to register, but were prevented from doing it because of the absence of the commissioners. Again, when the booths were open for business it was found that the crowd was so great that the booth could not be approached and hence several thousands did not register.

* * *

About 30,000 Home Comers.

At the time the books were closed yesterday evening there were hundreds of persons waiting to register, but by that time all of the 25,000 ball tickets had been given out and there was little further incentive to wait for a chance to write one's name. An official estimate given last night by R. E. Hughes, Director General, placed the number of Home Comers in Louisville at about 30,000. This number will be augmented largely to-day, for it was announced yesterday evening by officials of all of the roads entering Louisville that the sale of tickets at one fare for the round trip plus twenty-five cents, had been extended over to-day and to-morrow, owing to the great travel expected those two days. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company announced that tickets would be sold at that rate to-day and to-morrow from Bank Lick on the Cincinnati division; Yarnallton on the Lexington division; Bloomfield, Springfield, Rowland, Greensburg, Glasgow, Bowling Green and all intermediate points. These tickets will be good returning June 18. It was understood last night at Executive Committee headquarters that all the roads had taken similar action.

The Armory was closed at 10 o'clock last night, and it will not be open to the public to-day. No sooner had the big gates clanked shut than a small army of men was put to work removing the 12,000 chairs to the basement, where they will be stored until Saturday evening. As soon as the chairs were taken out, another division of laborers started in with brooms, mops and pails, cleaning the floor, preparatory to the ball to-night.

* * *

Fine Ballroom Floor.

As soon as the hall is thoroughly swept and scrubbed the men will begin to wax the floor, and it is expected that the throng which will swing through the mazes of the waltz, two-step and other dances to-night will trip onto as fine a ball-room floor as there is in the country. The committee in charge has given out every ticket it possesses, and no more are to be had for love or money.

On this account several thousand people will be disappointed. All trains entering Louisville yesterday carried tremendous crowds, according to statements of various railroad station officials. At the Tenth-street station it was said last night that all of the evening trains had arrived loaded down, while traffic all day was heavy. The same condition existed at the Seventh-street station and at Fourteenth street. Outgoing traffic is reported light.

The registrations, almost complete, as reported last night, were as follows:

REVIVE PIONEER DAYS IN OLD KENTUCKY

DANIEL BOONE'S MEMORY TO BE HONORED.

PAINTED INDIANS WILL ATTACK SETTLERS' FORT.

TO UNVEIL GREAT STATUE.

Cherokee Park will be one of the centers of entertainment this afternoon. Everything, from a reception by the Boone family to an attack on Boonesboro by the Cherokee Indians will take place there. A pleasing programme in connection with the unveiling of the statue of Daniel Boone, consisting of music and addresses, will be carried out. Miss Helen Stewart will unveil the monument and Breckinridge Castleman will deliver the presentation address on behalf of the donor, C. C. Bickel, to the Board of Park Commissioners for the city of Louisville. The address of acceptance on behalf of the Board of Park Commissioners will be delivered by Col. R. T. Durrett. Before the unveiling the band will play "Dixie," and at the conclusion of Col. Durrett's address the band will play "My Old Kentucky Home."

The Boone family reception, to be held at Rest Cottage, will begin at 2 o'clock. The affair will be in charge of Arthur Rutledge, chairman of the subcommittee. A registration book will be placed at the disposal of those whose ancestors date back to Daniel Boone.

At 3 o'clock the statue of Daniel Boone, modeled by Miss Enid Yandell, the sculptor, and presented to the city of Louisville through the Board of Park Commissioners, will be unveiled.

One of the principal features of the afternoon at Cherokee Park will be a reproduction of the Indian attack on Ft. Boonesboro. Settlers busily engaged in peaceful pursuits will be attacked by Indians while Daniel Boone is off on a hunting trip. An exciting conflict follows, and just when it seems that the fort and its defenders are doomed to destruction Boone returns to the rescue. The fort has been erected and everything is in readiness for the sham battle.

Another feature of the exercises at Cherokee Park will be an open-air dance on a specially arranged dance floor over the tennis courts of the park. Thomas Tuley, chairman of the subcommittee, will be in charge. He has arranged, through John G. Matthews, commissioner from Knox county, to have sixty couples present from the mountains. They will indulge in old-fashioned dances, which will be concluded with a Virginia reel dance, the public joining in.

SELLING CHAMELEONS AND HAVE NO LICENSE.

Vern Anderson and Joe Baker were arrested yesterday evening at Fourth avenue and Jefferson streets by Patrolman Cross on the charge of peddling without a license. They were selling chameleons. They are both from Jefferson county.

POPULAR AIRS

Applauded By Thousands At Central Park.

SHORT PROGRAMME, BUT EVERYONE WAS PLEASED.

LINCOLN CABIN GIVEN PATRIOTIC REVERENCE.

PERGALA WAS POPULAR.

Thousands of Home Comers shifted their center of interest last night from the Armory and the downtown districts to Central Park, where they listened to popular airs by Wehrley's Band, and took a breath of fresh air beneath the elms and the oaks of one of Louisville's beauty spots. Conservative estimates put the number of the people that poured into the park between the hours of 7 and 8 at from 10,000 to 15,000.

Early in the evening the Fourth-avenue cars, running at close intervals, often not more than half a block apart, began to move the crowds, and there was no lessening of the numbers for two hours. The Sixth-street line also carried its full quota of passengers.

It seemed as if every man and woman wished to get out under the stars and listen as they promenaded the well-kept walks and the smooth turf, to listen to the old-time melodies. The old people were there, and the babies, the babies who went to sleep in their mothers' arms to the sweet strains of "Auld Lang Syne" and "Suwanee River."

Abandons Programme.

The platform erected in the center of the park for the public ceremonies to be enacted there in connection with the display of the Lincoln Cabin served as a band stand. On account of the absence of lights and chairs from the stand, Director Gus Wehrley was compelled to abandon the elaborate programme he had prepared for the evening and to play only the more popular and better-known airs. That these were highly acceptable to the people was evident from the storm of applause that greeted the performance of "My Old Kentucky Home." When the band played "Dixie" the great throng, packed as far back in both directions as one could see from the platform, broke into cheers, that continued for many minutes.

The band, composed of twenty-four men, played, among other things, during the evening, "Dreadnaught," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Dixie," "Suwanee River," "Happy Heine," "Columbia," "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home, Sweet Home."

The great crowd was perfectly orderly and in the best of humor, and Lieut. Adams and his detail of fourteen patrolmen had nothing further to do than to enjoy the music.

Saw Lincoln's Cabin.

Most of the visitors to the park took a look at the Lincoln cabin and commented on the rude simplicity of the early home of the famous rail-splitter. All approached in a spirit of patriotic reverence, but many made remarks expressive of their disappointment in their first view of the rude log cabin, without roof or mortar. One misguided darky explained to another that it was Daniel Boone's cabin.

The pergola afforded a charming promenade to those who came for an outing, many who could not get close enough to the platform strolled beneath the trees or sat on the grass, or went to the Jockey Club or Jacob Park.

The concert was concluded at 10 o'clock.

KISSED W. O. BRADLEY

WHEN SHE LEFT KENTUCKY YEARS AGO.

Former Governor Only Baby Then—Meets Mrs. Nancy Nevin First Time Since.

The California delegation held a reception in the parlor of the Galt House last night from 8 to 10 o'clock. The function was purely informal with no speeches, but was a purely handshaking, heart-to-heart affair. Col. J. Marion Brooks and Mrs. Nancy Nevin, who have in charge the Los Angeles delegation, assisted by the young women of the party, received the visitors. Several hundred people, a large number of them Californians or ex-Californians, were guests. Music was furnished by one of the California women. Friends who had been separated for years renewed the associations of days gone by and hand clasps and eyes wet with tears told eloquently of the joys of the meeting.

One of the most pleasing features of the reception was the meeting between Mrs. Nevin and ex-Gov. William O. Bradley. When Mrs. Nevin left Kentucky Gov. Bradley was a baby, and he was the last person whom she kissed good-bye. Gov. Bradley is a first cousin of Mrs. Nevin, their mothers having been sisters, but in the separation of years each had lost track of the other and family history had grown indistinct. Reports had reached Mrs. Nevin of the growing prominence of William O. Bradley in Kentucky and his subsequent elevation as chief executive of the State, but she was not sure that he was the same man that she had kissed when she said goodbye to her old Kentucky home and journeyed into the far West. Not till she clasped the hand of Gov. Bradley last night and heard him speak his mother's name did she know that this distinguished Kentuckian was her first cousin.

PRETTY MAID FROM RUSSELL.

MISS DORA PATTERSON, Maid of Honor for Russell.

Interesting Gossip of Those Who Are Home Again

Cheering thousands making a deafening din all around him, Hayes Redman, nine months of age and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Redman, of Larue county, slept the sleep of the exhausted and the innocent on the top of the table at the Larue county headquarters in the Armory. He was fortunate enough to be in Kentucky and knows of no other home than the "Old Kentucky Home." The music and the singing that filled the great hall had no more effect on him than to sooth him to sleep. Hundreds crowded around the sleeping baby on the table, patted his fat legs and rubbed his silky hair, but no allen hand profaned him and he slept peacefully.

* * *

Campbell Pigman, of Johnson county, Ark., was a former Knott county man who lingered around the headquarters yesterday. When he was born, fifty-seven years ago, Knott county was not Knott, but was Mitchell county. Mr. Pigman has been in Arkansas for over fifteen years and is going back to his old home to see if he knows any of those who are there. So far as he knows he is the only Kentuckian from his county to come to the Home Coming.

The crowd pressing into the entrance of the Armory was something tremendous. Some enjoyed the crush and others didn't. One girl, as dainty as they ever get to be, didn't like it very much.

"I had my chin up against the back of a man's coat," she said, "all the way in. It was the roughest coat you ever saw, and my chin was rubbing on it for the longest time. Do you think they'll let us out the side door?"

Some of them liked it. Two young girls had lots of fun and made the trip into the entrance several times. Each time they got in they passed out one of the side exits, joined the crowd at the front and crushed their way in. Coming down the stairs from the balconies women risked injuries to their skirts. It was a frequent thing to hear a woman shriek:

"Lift up your dress, please, ma'am."

W. D. Cox, of Elsmore, Kan., met his cousin, Robert Cox, of Chicago, as he was leaving the validating office at Third avenue and Main street yesterday.

"I knew him the minute I saw him," said Mr. Cox, "and slapped him on the shoulder. 'Hello, Billy Cox,' I said. He recognized me at once."

Both are natives of Madison county and will return there after Home Coming is over in Louisville. William Cox is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Louise. Mr. Cox founded the town of Elsmore, having laid it out and built the first house there. Now he is one of the leading merchants there.

* * *

Gordon Bolling, of Windon, Ill., left his birthplace in Washington county when he was five years old. He is now eighty-nine years of age, and until this week had never been back to Kentucky. He is hale and hearty and is entering into the spirit of the Home Coming with all the abandon of a child. In Louisville he is being entertained at 1108 East Breckinridge street. The Washington county Commissioner entered him for the longest-away prize.

* * *

James Charter, of Blandinsville, Ill., is another native of Washington county, who has been absent from the place of his birth for many years. The time between three and four months of age when he was forcibly removed from "Old Kentucky" and now is seventy-three.

The patrolmen on duty at the side entrances to the Armory made a bluff at demanding Home-coming badges of all who tried to enter. However, about as soon as a crowd of dissapointed ones, many of whom had forgotten to pin on their badges, assembled, they relented, being Kentuckians, and let everybody in. Pretty girls they didn't dare to stop.

Probably the one who has traveled the longest distance to attend the Home Coming and the one who, when he gets back to his present dwelling place, will have traveled 6,000 miles, is Bernard Levi, of Panama. He is now twenty-two years of age and is an Owensboro boy, who has been away from his home since he was seven years of age. He has entered for the prize for the one traveling the longest distance.

The barrels of ice water in the Armory are very convenient and are very largely patronized, but for a tall man are too low. The dippers are attached to the edges of the barrels by chains that are too short for a tall man to get them where the water will do any good. Many a big Kentuckian yesterday misjudged the distance to his lips and got very much laughed at on account of it.

Tete-a-tete on two chairs in the center of the Armory after the crowd had left yesterday afternoon sat Wyatt Shipp and his brother, Ben F. Shipp, who had found each other just a few moments before they were accosted by a reporter. The meeting was the first they had had in twenty-three years and the two remained on the chairs in the great hall for over two hours before they got used to each other. The former is from Kansas, where he has lived since 1867, and the latter is from the old homestead in Larue county. Neither knew for sure that the other would be in Louisville, although each hoped to find his brother.

Wyatt Shipp left his old home in Hart county to settle in Kansas in 1867, and is now at Savonburg, Allen county, Kansas, in the edge of the natural gas belt. All his life he has been a farmer and a stock raiser, and has so prospered that now he has retired. His family, all of them, are Kansans, and did not come to Kentucky with him. He was back in Kentucky in 1883, but had seen none of his relatives here since them. He did not advise his brother that he would be here, intending to surprise him. He reached Louisvilel on Tuesday.

Ben F. Shipp reached Louisville yesterday and saw the name of his brother on the Hart county register. Immediately he began to look for him and he was pointed out by another Hart countian who had met him. To-day is Ben F. Shipp's fifty-seventh birthday and the two brothers are going to have the time of their lives to-day. After Home Coming here Wyatt Shipp will accompany his brother to his old home.

"I am going to stay there," he said, until I get homesick for Kansas. I have lived in Kansas so long that it has become almost a part of me and I expect to want to get back after a month or two."

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Wagner and their twelve children, of Kansas City, have come home. They are stopping with relatives on Campbell street, and expect to stay for some time. All of the little Wagners were not born in Kentucky, but their parents were, and the little folks are as good and as enthusiastic Home Comers as anybody.

Capt. Irwin Dugan, of Louisville, will be host to a jolly party of Home Comers on an excursion Sunday, given in honor of Miss Louise Lee Hardin, the originator of Home Coming. Others in the party will be Miss Rosa Hardin, sister of Miss Louise Hardin, Mrs. L. E. Woodard, of Denver; Miss Laura Ellis, of Denver; Dr. John Law, of Denver; William Ellis, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Grace L. Brown. Capt. Dugan started to make arrangements with Capt. C. C. Fuller of the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company, but the latter would not hear of recompense and tendered the courtesies of the line to Miss Hardin through Capt. Dugan. The party will leave Louisville Sunday morning on the City of Louisville and go up the river until the City of Cincinnati, on the return trip, is met, when a transfer will be made to the latter boat for Louisville. All of the party are Kentuckians. Dr. Law left Breathitt county in 1849, along with other "forty-niners," and struck it rich at Cripple Creek. He ranks now as a retired capitalist in Denver. This is his first visit to Kentucky since he left the State.

No more enthusiastic Home Comer could be found than Col. J. Marion Brooks and Mrs. Nancy Nevin, who head the Los Angeles delegation, which was the first organized club to reach the city, having come in a special car with thirty-one people. As soon as the celebration is over Col. Brooks and Mrs. Nevin are going to Danville, Ky., which will be the starting point of a pilgrimage which they will undertake and which will require about two weeks to complete. In speaking of it, Col. Brooks said:

"Mrs. Nevin and I, on reaching Danville, will obtain the finest pair of horses that we can hire and we will traverse every mile of the territory that we knew in our childhood. Not a church, not a graveyard, not a cabin will escape us, but we will visit every place that may be in any way connected with our early life or with our family history. We may kill the horses, but if we do we'll pay for them and get another pair. We will not travel a single foot of the way by railroad, and would love to go on foot to many places if our strength and time would permit. While we have enjoyed the festivities here more than we dreamed was possible, we anticipate no greater happiness in this world than this trip to the scenes of our childhood."

A former Louisville citizen who is among the army of Home Comers is R. T. Oglesby, of Chicago, a son of the late Capt. Ben Oglesby. Mr. Oglesby was connected with the firm of Bridgeford & Co. here for a number of years, but has been a resident of Chicago for the last fifteen years. During this time he has built up a very large business in foundry supplies and has become another ex-Kentuckian who has achieved wealth in distant States. Mr. and Mrs. Oglesby are visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Radburn at 405 East Chestnut street.

J. H. Ogburn, of Clarksville, Tenn., is "one of the boys, if he is not a Kentuckian." He is atending Home Coming and is a guest of the Rev. F. G. Brodie, his uncle, of 623 West Ormsby avenue.

C. C. Calhoun, now of Washington, D. C., where he represents the State in its war claims on the Government, is back in Kentucky. He has already saved to Kentucky nearly a million dollars and is constantly engaged in pressing other claims against the Union, claims which grew out of the Civil and the Spanish wars. Mr. Calhoun's home is in Fayette county, although he was born in Daviess county. He is in Louisville with his mother and Mrs. Calhoun. His mother said yesterday that she maintains that the cornerstone of the new State Capitol should have her son's name on it, as he has been instrumental in getting the money which will go a long ways toward building it.

"Although I may sometimes stay for a time in Washington," he said, "I couldn't think of having my home in any other place than in Kentucky. I always come home to vote and it has cost me lots of money."

"I hope to stay in this country long enough," said J. W. Hager, "to get some of the rough edges knocked off of me. I have been out with those halfbreeds so long in Oklahoma that I hardly know how to act in a civilized district. It has been thirty-seven years since I left Kentucky, and I have often wished to be back. When I first went West I did considerable work amongst the Indians. Was I ever scalped? No, sir, for there was not a brave in the tribe that would keep up with me whenever anybody said anything about scalping. I made some mighty good friends, though, and this badge which I have on was made by an Indian girl, Miss Short-tooth, a daughter of an Indian chief, and was given me as a token of her esteem. She found out I was coming to the great Home Coming, and she wanted people to know my history. You can read it all for yourself," and Mr. Hager unpinned his long, red ribbon, covered with pen and ink sketches, and handed it around to those near. Among other drawings there were the seals of the different States in which Mr. Hager had lived and their mottoes under them. Besides Kentucky, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma were represented. Mr. Hager is originally from Magoffin county, and will go there from Louisville before returning to Kingfisher, Okla., where he now resides.

"If I had it all to do over again I would never leave Kentucky," said J. D. Hawkins, of Mt. Vernon, Mo. "If I had known thirty-five years ago what I know now, namely, that Kentucky is the only State in the Union to live in, I would never have wandered away, but you see, it takes experience to find out these things, and now it is too late to change again. I was raised on a farm and I am still farming, and I know what good land is. You'll find the best right here in this State, and although I must admit that there is a great amount of unproductive soil, still I will say that what is good is certainly 'good,' and beats all the other States put together."

Thomas de Graffenried, formerly of Russellville, now of New York City, is attending the Home Coming exercises. Mr. de Graffenried is a young Kentucky lawyer, who, by dint of talent and hard work, is making a success in the metropolis.

Among the visitors in the city registered at The Seelbach are Judge A. W. Rucker and wife, of Fort Logan, Col. Judge Rucker, when a boy of eight, went West with his father and his family. He recalls his first visit to Louisville. It was in June, 1855, when his father brought him with the other members of his family, his 150 slaves and all his personal property to this city to take boat down the Ohio for Booneville, Mo. The family stopped over at the Galt House and made the trip on a Charles F. steamboat. Judge Rucker has acquired wealth and position in Colorado, but will be remembered in Kentucky as having challenged Senator J. C. S. Blackburn to deadly combat through a misunderstanding which grew out of a controversy as to what occurred at an interview held by the Judge and the Senator with President Cleveland. Explanations and apologies followed, and they became and still are warm and devoted friends. Judge Rucker will attend the Mercer county Home Coming, as he was born in that county, and will be accompanied by his wife, who is a cousin of Asher G. Caruth, of this city.

R. C. Ford, Home-coming Commissioner for Bell county, is distributing among the visitors to his headquarters a handsome booklet on "The Cumberland Coal Field and Its Creators." This little volume, prepared by J. C. Tipton, is well illustrated, printed on good paper and shows what is being done for the development of the wonderful coal and mineral resources of the mountain counties of Kentucky.

The history of the coal fields of that region, as well as the present methods of development, are well set forth.

Through an error of the County Registration Committee, the name of T. K. Roberts was omitted from the list of vice commissioners in the lists published yesterday. Mr. Roberts is vice commissioner for Lee county.

Added to the force of patrolmen stationed at the armory were twenty-four men yesterday, and they had all they could do to keep the crowd from becoming congested at the various entrances and exits. During most of the day Capt. James Hendricks, of Central police station, was in personal charge of the men, who handled the immense crowds in a creditable manner. The eight firemen originally stationed at the armory to guard against fire have been kept busy preventing the Home Comers from smoking inside the drill hall. There has been not the least sign of fire about the place during the week.

R. S. Brown, chief executive, has received the following letter from W. F. McClure, of Newport, Ky., regarding the Home-coming festivities:

Newport, Ky., June 12, 1906.—R. S. Brown, Chief Executive Home-coming Committee, Louisville, Ky.: Sincere congratulations to our honorable Governor, yourself and all of Kentucky's sons and daughters assembled from far and near on this happy Home-coming. Our worthy sires settled here in 1782. We represent four generations, James Washington McClure, aged eighty-six; his son, William Franklin; his grandson, William Franklin, Jr., and his great grandson, Jasper Reed McClure. May this not be the last of such a happy gathering. Very sincerely,

WILIAM FRANKLIN M'CLURE.

From far-away Albuquerque, N. M., word has been received by R. S. Brown, chief executive, from an exiled Kentuckian, expressing his regrets at being unable to attend the Home-coming festivities. The letter follows:

Albuquerque, N. M., June 12.—R. S. Brown, and Others of Home-coming Festivities, Louisville, Ky.: Sorry I am not with you enjoying the world-wide hospitality of my native State, but I know the majority of the 600,000 former Kentuckians who sought other lands and climes, are with you this week and Louisville, where I first saw the light of day, will do honor to her name in receiving and entertaining the home-comers.

My ancestors were the Taylors, the Beckhams, the Figgs, and my grandfather McCreight many years ago was a member of the L. Ender's Carriage Manufactory of Louisville. I have been identified with the newspaper business and the upbuilding of Albuquerque for twenty-five years, but every two years I visit dear mother and other relatives at Shelbyville. Everybody will have a good time this week and all sing that grand old song, "My Old Kentucky Home."

Thomas H. Francis, of St. Louis, is delighted with the Home-coming event. He remained over yesterday and enjoyed the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the statue to Stephen Collins Foster. He is a brother of former Gov. David R. Francis, of Missouri, and is a business partner with him. He said that he never dreamed of the magnitude of a gathering like the one now on in Louisville and simply the result of the sentiment of a song. Mr. Francis paid a glowing tribute to the Armory building. He said it is one of the most magnificent structures that he has ever had the pleasure of entering.

Dr. Spencer Graves, one of the most prominent physicians of St. Louis, left last night for his home, after enjoying a three-days' stay at Home Coming. He is a native Kentuckian, having gone to St. Louis a dozen years or more ago. He said he was prouder than ever to his native State and was frank to state that no other place on earth but Louisville could have drawn such a crowd on such an issue as Home Coming.

H. G. Evans, of Bonham, Tex., arrived here Tuesday night, returning to his native State for the first time since he left it in February, 1857, being more than forty-nine years ago. He was about three and one-half months old at the time his father and mother moved to Texas, and has lived in Bonham all his life. Mr. Evans was born in Butler county, Kentucky, on October 29, 1856. He is a cousin of H. B. Morehead, the editor of the Green River Republican, published at Morgantown. Speaking of the Courier-Journal and Mr. Watterson he said Texas was proud of both and especially of the Grand Old Man. He heard his speech Wednesday and had the pleasure of shaking hands with him, which he would not have missed for any consideration. In looking over the fine and representative body of the sons and daughters of Kentucky Mr. Evans said he felt he was at home and he was like the little boy who came rushing in and told his mother that there was a great big, ripproaring lion out in the yard, and his mother said: "Son, you know that is a story," but the boy insisted that it was there. His mother said she would go and see and if it was not true she would surely punish him, and after an investigation she came back and said: "Son, that is no lion, it is only a big dog." And she immediately sent Johnnie upstairs to say his prayers. He went tripping off, and in a short time came back whistling and said: "Mother, I have said my prayers now." "Did you ask God to forgive you?" "Yes, mother. He said that was all right. He thought it was a lion, too, when He first saw it." Mr. Evans said he thought the audience was composed of Texans and that he was at home.

Mrs. Ophelia Lawrence Blair is a native Kentuckian, whose fame has extended beyond the bounds of her home State. Her book, "Poems of Humanity," has placed her in the front rank as a writer of verse. Her collection of autographs from distinguished authors, statesmen and writers is perhaps the most notable in the country. She is at present associate editor on Events, a woman's journal, in Chicago. But no matter where she goes she is a Kentuckian and proud of her native State. Mrs. Blair is the guest of her son, Mr. Lawrence Blair, and will participate in the programme for Saturday evening at the Armory. Mrs. Blair has traveled extensively and her fame as a woman orator is widespread.

FOSTER'S FLUTE

On Exhibition Among Kentucky Relics at Armory.

ACQUIRED BY COMPOSER IN TRADE FOR GAME COCK.

THOUSANDS CROWD INTO HALL TO VIEW HISTORICAL ARTICLES.

COMPLETE LIST OF RELICS.

The latest addition to the collection of Kentucky relics on exhibition at the Armory and perhaps the most interesting, is the flute that was the property of Stephen Collins Foster and on which the melody of "My Old Kentucky Home" was worked out and first played. It is wooden and an eight-keyed instrument and is in excellent condition. It was brought to Louisville yesterday and added to the collection by Col. William Hamilton, of Allegheny, Pa., to whom it was given by Mr. Foster on the condition that the recipient learn to play it. The history attached to the instrument is most interesting.

Early, long before he wrote the song, Mr. Foster made a trip to Nashville, Tenn., and while there bought a game cock to which he became attracted by its sporting qualities. Returning to Allegheny he showed the cock to one Frank Robinson, who lived there. Mr. Robinson liked the bird and became so enamored of it that he offered to trade the flute, which was then in his possession, for the spurred creature. That was how Mr. Foster acquired the instrument.

* * *

Couldn't Learn To Play.

It passed into the hands of Col. Hamilton in 1857 and was given to him by the author himself on the condition that he should learn to play it. Col. Hamilton said yesterday that he made many and earnest attempts to acquire the habit, but although he did get so he could make a noise, he never made much progress. Last year he gave the instrument, which long ago he had placed in an elaborate leather case, to his son A. R. Hamilton.

Col. Hamilton is not a Kentuckian, but for ten years, between 1851 and 1851, he was a steamboat officer, and made the run between Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Louisville, and gained a wide acquaintance among Kentuckians, with whom he is popular. He couldn't resist the coming to the Home Coming, and while in Kentucky will stay with friends in Bardstown. In 1861 Col. Hamilton went into the war, after which he returned to Allegheny, where for the past twenty-eight years he has been superintendent of the Allegheny Park system.

Thousands of persons inspect the collection of relics every day and pour over the glass cases in which the most valuable of them are exhibited with great interest. The Boone relics, of course, are the greatest centers of attraction. Since the catalogue was published other valuable Boone relics have been added. Some of them are: Daniel Boone's birthstone, wreath made out of hair from the Boone family, a little grewsome, but still interesting—it is owned in Louisville and has come down in the possession of the Wilcox and the Beckley families; two original letters of Daniel Boone; conch shell used by Squire Boone, younger brother of Daniel Boone at Boonesborough; hand mirror and spoon once owned by Mrs. Lucy Boone, the wife of Squire Boone and others.

* * *

May Prolong Exhibit.

The exhibit, which is large and complete, is the result of three months' work on the part of Charles Thruston Johnson, chairman of the Committee on Relics, and Miss Blanche Comley Huber, secretary of the committee. The members of the committee are Henry Baird, George T. Cross, Clem W. Huggins, J. W. Biles, George L. Danforth, J. W. Mitchell, Thomas S. Tuley, Attilia Cox, Jr., John Bacon Hutchings and Abram Renick.

A movement is on foot to have the relics which have been gathered kept on exhibition for a few weeks after Home Coming so that they may be seen by Louisville people. Many of those who are inspecting them now are local people, but such a crowd is around that the inspection is not altogether satisfactory. Among the other valuable relics which have been added to the collection since the catalogue was printed are:

Picture of the first white girl born in Kentucky; the dagger and silver star of Maj. Edwards King, commander of the Third Kentucky Brigade in the War of 1812; powder horn carried by Dr. Thomas Walker when he made an exploration of Kentucky in 1750. Miss Mary Green Lawrence, of Louisville, who is also a niece of Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, is a great-great-granddaughter of Dr. Walker. Silk flag of spun silk made in Louisville on Jefferson street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, embroidered by Mrs. Henry S. Tyler, and carried by Mr. Tyler through the Mexican War; silver castor owned by Gen. Christ, who was a fellow-soldier with Boone at Boonesborough; spear head from the fort at Boonesborough, in the possession of Dr. M. F. Coomes family and which killed a woman at the attack on the fort.

"Business."

Thursday Evening, June 14.—The New York market declined sharply, closing feverish and unsettled at a slight advance from the lowest.

Money on call was firmer at 3 to 3½ per cent., ruling at 3½. Time loans were strong at 4¼ to 4⅜. Sterling exchange was heavy.

Final quotations on July wheat were off ⅝c to ¼c. Corn was unchanged. Oats were up ⅜c.

The cotton market ruled firm during most of the session. Closing prices were about 8 points above opening quotations.

The Chicago cattle market was steady to weak; the hog market 5c lower and the sheep market strong.

A Loyal Critic.

A patriotic "Home Comer" complains that in publishing the confession of Curtis Jett during Home-coming Week the Courier-Journal has done much to counteract the good effects of the festival. "We want to send your souvenir edition to our friends in other States," says he, "and we cannot do it without including a story of the terrible situation in Breathitt county as described by Jett."

The Courier-Journal is a newspaper. It does not make or control the news; it prints it. If there is an earthquake in San Francisco, a bank robbery in St. Paul, or a dynamite plot in Madrid, the Courier-Journal cannot hinder nor help it. It cannot fix the dates so that if events must occur they will fall on convenient times. No more did it control the confession of Curtis Jett. The prisoner made it. The Courier-Journal was enterprising and was the first newspaper to obtain the text and, true to its duty, the paper published it. It could not have done otherwise.

But why should the publication do the State hurt? The situation in Breathitt county has been exploited these many years in the newspapers of the entire country. Persons who read newspapers at all are thoroughly familiar with the whole horrible scandal. Its stench has permeated all corners of the map. This being true, they could not escape very well the acquirement of knowledge of an improvement in conditions, of the ousting from public office of one of the employers of the assassins and of the efforts of the law, tardy though they be, to convict them of murder. The confession of Jett forms another chapter in the story of the reclamation of Breathitt county and the gradual victory of law. It shows that the net is surely closing in on the men who have been defying the law for so long. It is a prophecy of order, peace and prosperity.

The Practical Way.

Much has been said and written of late concerning the duties and rights of "citizenship," but no one has put the case more cogently than Judge Kyle, of Kansas City, in the course of an address before a class at the William Jewell College:

"A man's conception of his relationship to his fellow men is determined by his respect for their institutions and their laws. Laws are made and enforced by a community of which the citizen is a component part. His duty as a citizen in his relation to his fellow men is to see that that good laws are enacted and that they are enforced. A man who simply obeys the law through fear of punishment and who takes no interest in its enforcement, is a citizen of low type and a menace to his country.

"A citizen who connives and schemes to have a law enacted that will grant an unjust and special favor, or seeks to evade a law by creating or raising technicalities which are seemingly without the intent or pale of the law for selfish gain is a moral criminal. He is not a citizen, but a traitor to his country. Good citizens employ legal counsel in order that they may better obey the law instead of finding a way to evade it. A citizen does most for his fellow men when he assists in the enforcement of all the laws.

"One of the greatest evils that dwarf citizenship is the combination and centralization of forces in the business world, which enlists capable men who become subservient to every material interest of the combination, and the questionable methods employed to accomplish the ends desired, without regard to the welfare of the community."

We commend these words to the "parlor socialists," as they were aptly called by Secretary Taft, who, driven into a state of panic by certain revelations of the abuse of power by certain capitalistic interests, have gone heedlessly over to the fantastic cult. If these visionaries would come to their senses and labor for a greater respect for law and for honest dealing in all walks of life they might accomplish something. To try this is at least to move along practical lines. Why should the whole structure of a feasible Government be changed into one which could not last fifteen minutes? Why should republicanism, which in its ideal interpretation means an equal chance for everybody, give way to socialism, which means the confiscation by Government of the chance of everybody? Why should the long route to chaos be preferred over the short route to serene prosperity?

If we can develop fastidious regard for honor and respect for law under a republican form of Government, what more is needed? If we cannot do this, how can we hope to do it under a socialistic system? And if it cannot be done under the latter, why change? It is appalling to think what dishonest men could do to the people during the fifteen-minute career of a socialistic experiment.

Daniel Boone.

The feature of the "Home-coming" programme for to-day will be the unveiling of a bronze statue of Daniel Boone at Cherokee Park this afternoon. The original was executed in plaster by Miss Enid Yandell, of Louisville and first exhibited at the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, in 1893. A public-spirited citizen of Louisville, Mr. C. C. Bickel, had it executed in bronze under the supervision of Miss Yandell, and it will to-day be presented by him through Col. R. T. Durrett to the Park Commissioners as a permanent ornament of the park.

Nothing could be more appropriate to the occasion of this great memorable gathering of Kentuckians from distant States than the inauguration of such a worthy testimonial to the memory of the great pioneer, who blazed the way through the wilderness for those who planted civilization in this fair land. It is not claimed for the great woodsman and Indian fighter that he was a man of heroic mold in executive or administrative capacity, but he had the elements of courage and the intuitive qualities which made him invaluable in counsel to superior officers and in the execution of daring scouts or desperate adventures. There has been much error in the biographies of this simple but great character who played so large a part in the early history of Kentucky, even as to his lineage and the place of his birth.

The family of Daniel Boone came from the County of Essex, England, with the followers of William Penn, being Quakers, and settled in Bucks county in the eastern part of Pennsylvania bordering on the Delaware river. They were substantial people, the house in which the pioneer was born, a comfortable residence of stone, being yet in good repair. His father was a farmer, of whom little has been preserved, but he had a brother who was a man of scientific education. When Daniel Boone was in his teens his father removed to Maryland for a time and thence to the Yadkin river in North Carolina. It was in this primitive country that the future pioneer became an adept in hunting and woodcraft. It was here also that he had the opportunity of studying Indian character, living near the route by which the Indians north of the Ohio, the Shawnees and other tribes, kept up communications with the tribes in North and South Carolina.

With the life of Boone after he came to Kentucky until he emigrated first to the Kanawha country and later to Missouri, the record is quite plain, save as to one point. Little note is ever taken of the fact that in 1781 he was a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses from Fayette county, which shows the estimate in which he was held. Again Kentucky histories were silent as to the fact that about 1787, having lost his land entries from want of knowledge of the legal technicalities necessary to perfect his titles, he removed with his family to Kanawha county, now in West Virginia and settled on a tract of land near Charleston, the present capital of that State. From here also he was sent again as member of the House of Burgesses, 1789-90, the journal of that body having his name among the list and it appearing also in proceeding of a call of the House when he was summoned to the bar to explain his absence. It is said that he walked to Richmond, where he attended the meeting of the General Assembly. In 1791 a new county was formed adjacent to Kanawha and named for him.

One reason which has led to the error in history crediting him with a continuous residence in Kentucky until his removal to Missouri, is the fact that he often came here during the summer to survey lands, either on his own account or in conjunction with other surveyors. His family remained continuously in Kanawha county until near the close of the century, when he removed to Missouri and with his son-in-law, Flanders Calloway, settled on the north side of the Missouri near the mouth of the Charette, forty or fifty miles above the mouth of the Missouri. The county is now named Calloway and the house in which Calloway lived is a substantial two-story stone building. Washington Irving, in his book, Astoria, mentions that in 1812, as the expedition to the Pacific passed the Charette its members saw Boone, but Lewis and Clarke make no reference to him. It was here that Chester Harding visited Boone and painted the portrait, by which he is best known, a short time before Boone's death, which occurred September 20, 1820. Although past eighty-nine, he was active, and hunted until a short time before he died.

At the session of the Legislature of Kentucky, 1844-45 the necessary measures were taken for the removal of the remains of Boone and his wife and their interment in the public cemetery at Frankfort. Accordingly, on the 15th of September, 1845, they were laid to rest in a picturesque spot, overlooking the Kentucky, with fitting ceremonies, attended by a large concourse of people from every portion of the State. Later the Legislature provided an appropriate monument.

The Berea College Case.

It is fortunate that there was no division on party lines in the decision of the Court of Appeals on the appeal of Berea College. The opinion of the court was rendered by a Republican, and the only Judge to dissent was a Democrat. We say it is fortunate, because we think it is always well that there should be no ground, even a poor ground, for charging party bias against Judges. The question before the court was not strictly political, but it related to the validity of a statute passed by a Democratic Legislature, and largely denounced by those of different political views.

The law related to the co-education of the races and the court found that one section was invalid. Section 4 which makes it unlawful to teach pupils of both races by the same school within twenty-five miles of each other, was pronounced invalid as exceeding the police power of the State. The State itself teaches both races in separate schools and within twenty-five miles of each other—in fact, at very short distances. But the usual rule is followed in this respect. An unconstitutional provision in an act does not affect the rest of the law unless it is so closely connected with the rest that there is not any possibility of enforcing the remainder. The court says that the remainder of the act is complete in itself, and the unconstitutional part may be ignored without affecting the remainder.

The act was assailed as violating the bill of rights of the State Constitution as well as because it was said to be contrary to the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution. As to the first point, the court says that the reservations in the bill of rights are impliedly subject to the police power of the State, which is essentially the power to preserve the State. The question is whether it is a fair exercise of the police power to prevent the teaching of the white and negro races together. As bearing on this it is said that the marriage of the two races is prohibited as contrary to the welfare of society. No one questions the validity of such statutes as being under the police power. The separate coach law is another case in point. These statutes have been sustained whenever questioned.

As to the charge that the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution has been violated, the court says that the act applies equally to all citizens; it makes no discrimination between different races. As to Berea College, as a corporation created by the State, it has no natural right to teach at all. The right to teach white and negro children in the same school is not a property right. The State may withhold it or qualify it.

An important part of the opinion, though not absolutely necessary to the decision, was the frank recognition of the difference of race and its consequences. "All this legislation," says the court in referring to other acts, "was aimed at something deeper and more important than the matter of choice. * * * The separation of the human family into races, distinguished no less by color than by temperament and other qualities, is as certain as anything in nature. * * * There exists in each race a homogenesis by which it will perpetually reproduce itself. Its instincts are gregarious. As a check, there is another, an antipathy to other races—which some call race prejudice. This is nature's guard to prevent the amalgamation of the races. A disregard of this antipathy to the point of mating between the races is unnatural, and begets a resentment in the normal mind. If then it is the legitimate exercise of the police power of the Government to prevent the mixing of the races in cross-breeding, it would seem to be equally within the same power to regulate that character of association which tends to the breach of the main desideratum—the purity of racial blood."

It is possible that this argument may be treated as obiter dictum, but it lies very near to the true doctrine upon this subject. The idea that the distinctions made between nature ought to be altogether disregarded in legislation is entertained by a good many, but it is not well founded. It is sufficient that these distinctions do not deprive any one of equality before the law. Neither Federal nor State legislation demands that the broad distinctions made by nature shall be altogether disregarded.

Railroad Passes.

Among those popularly supposed to be greatly interested in free passes, which the rate-making bill proposes to abolish, are newspaper men. It is quite true that the newspapers, as a rule, give in advertising, under one arrangement or another, a full equivalent for all the transportation which they get from the roads. In many cases they give a great deal more. Still the employes of newspapers have to a large extent enjoyed free transportation for many years, and they will be more or less affected by its withdrawal. So far as we have observed, this has made no particular difference in the attitude of newspapers toward the Rate Bill. They have advocated or opposed it on other grounds, and the heartiest opposition was manifested before the anti-pass amendment was put on.

The National Editorial Association has been in session at Indianapolis this week. A motion was introduced to petition Congress to amend the Rate Bill so as to exempt newspapers from the operation of the anti-pass clause. After considerable discussion, a motion was made to lay the resolution on the table. The motion to lay on the table was adopted, and the association thus took ground in favor of the abolition of interstate passes to themselves.

The campaign against passes is founded on various considerations. The most numerous class of opponents are perhaps affected by the belief that those who pay for their transportation have also to pay for those who are carried free. If the latter were required to pay their fare, they argue that those who do not get passes could be transported at much lower rates. To a large extent this assumption is perhaps unfounded. The men whose passes are cut off will not, universally or generally, pay their way. The most of them will remain at home. The amount that the railroad will save, therefore, by refusing passes is greatly exaggerated. There are occasions, of course, where special trains or special cars are run free, which are expensive to the roads, and this expense will be spared if the law be obeyed. But a large part of the men who hold passes travel on regular trains, instead of staying at home or going elsewhere. Some of those who have heretofore got passes will be compelled to travel, and so will have to pay, but the majority will not go. The roads will be somewhat benefited, perhaps, but not to the extent expected. A reduction of passenger fares will hardly result from the abolition of passes—at any rate, not in many cases.

The giving of passes to Congressmen, legislators and others in public employment has been very extensively censured, on the ground that it creates a bias in favor of the roads. It is quite true that some of the most intense supporters of rate making have been heretofore favored by the roads, and have gone about with their pockets full of free passes. While it is admitted that free transportation has not bribed them, there is a disposition in the popular mind to see public officials independent, and it is argued that they would be more free from bias if they were under no obligations to those who give passes.

The action of the National Educational Association was doubtless largely controlled by the consideration that newspaper men cannot afford to consult their private convenience in the discussion of matters affecting the public interest. Accordingly, no request was made to Congress to exempt the press from a general law relating to other citizens.

Everett W. Burdett, in the Journal of Political Economy, aptly attributes whatever partial success municipal ownership has had in Great Britain to the superior character of municipal government there. He contrasts British and American municipal governments, to the latter's disadvantage, of course. Moreover, Mr. Burdett finds that the work entailed by municipal ownership in Great Britain already has begun to result in the deterioration of municipal government in that country. "They are becoming less efficient. The new duties which they have taken upon themselves give them too much to do. The councils are becoming overburdened and 'in some cases fairly swamped with the extent and variety of the public concerns which engage their attention.' The chairman of the Manchester Gas Committee for ten years has spent six hours a day in the discharge of his official duties. When local administration was a comparatively simple matter it was easy to find business men who would give gratis the limited amount of time required for public service. Now that municipalities are running gas works, electric light plants, street railroads and a score of other public utilities it is not so easy to get competent business men for the councils. Unless they sacrifice their private affairs they cannot give due attention to those of the municipality."

The argument of the attorneys for the Hargis gang seems to have been that the gang should have been admitted to bail because it would be unreasonable to believe that the tools of the Hargis gang are high-toned and immaculate gentlemen whose veracity is beyond suspicion. And the Special Judge appointed to try these cases seems to have been convinced by this brilliant argument. There appears to be some remarkable law, as well as lawlessness in Breathitt.

Penrose is an apt pupil of Quay in one respect. He has had his recent State convention condemn all the things that the Pennsylvania machine stands for and promise all the things that it doesn't intend to do. That was a favorite practice of Quay's.

The report is that Chicago has been driven to an egg diet by the packing-house exposures. This is hardly fair to the packing houses, however, as Chicago was long ago drawn to the egg diet by the "one hard-boiled egg" offer.

The members of the Vassar faculty who defaced certain photographs of the girl students as they appeared in a recent theatrical performance before they would permit them to be used in the college publication evidently call them "limbs."

There certainly seems to be a large and happy houseparty in the Old Kentucky Home.

NO EVIDENCE.

Standard Oil Company Makes No Defense.

REFERS TO DOCUMENTS FILED WITH GARFIELD.

COMMISSIONER PROUTY HEARS ONE WITNESS.

ADJOURNMENT WITHOUT DAY.

Cleveland O., June 14.—The Interstate Commerce Commission reopened the investigation of the Standard Oil Company here to-day. C. A. Prouty was the only member of the commission present. J. T. Marchand, chief counsel for the commission, was assisted by S. S. Mehard, of Pittsburg.

In opening the session Commissioner Prouty said he had received a letter from Virgil P. K. Kline, chief counsel for the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, on June 7, in which it was stated that the Standard Oil Company did not desire at this time to offer any testimony.

Mr. Kline, who was present, corroborated this statement and said that this course was decided upon because he believed that a full reply to all the charges against the Standard Oil Company was now on file in the office of the Commissioner of Corporations.

* * *

Mr. Kline's Letter.

Mr. Kline's letter bearing on the subject as sent to the commission at Washington was as follows:

Cleveland, O., June 7, 1906—Hon. Judson C. Clements, Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C. My dear sir: At the conclusion of the hearing in this city, you requested me to state in writing what portion of the testimony heretofore given before the Industrial Commission I might desire to offer, also upon what subjects I might wish to submit evidence at some later date in behalf of the Standard Oil Company.

"I only on Monday last received a full transcript of the testimony recently taken here. So far as it reflects upon the relations of the Standard Oil Company to the officials of the country, it has already been fully answered by evidence tendered to Commissioner Garfield and on file in his office. I find that a large part of the so-called evidence taken here relates to alleged competitive practices in a few isolated cases in the country at large, but I deem it an unprofitable task to enter into a war of words with respect thereto. I note what you say in your letter of June 1, speaking in behalf of the commission, and I regret that you do not see your way clear to have me tender you the exhaustive answers by representatives of the company published in full in volume 1 of the report of the Industrial Commission, which I was prepared to do, but do not deem it important enough at this time in view of the full evidence heretofore given before that commission to go over the same ground again, and prefer to withdraw my request for a hearing, at least for the immediate future, which I accordingly do. Thanking you for your courtesy, I am, yours very truly, VIRGIL P. KLINE.

One Witness Heard.

Commissioner Prouty then asked if anybody else desired to be heard, and the only response was from Chief Counsel Marchand, who said he had the testimony of one witness to offer, that of M. C. Tully, an auditor in the freight department of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company.

Mr. Tully's testimony was concerning storage charges made against the Standard Oil Company at Chicago.

There was no cross-examination and there being no other witnesses, adjournment was taken without delay.

Chief Counsel Marchand declared at the close of the session that the failure of Mr. Kline to offer any testimony or put in a defense of any kind was a complete victory for the independent oil men.

"This session," said Mr. Marchand, "was called solely at Mr. Kline's request and upon his statement that he desired to be heard in answer to the numerous charges made. His change of front is surprising, to say the least, and I think we can interpret it as meaning that our charges cannot be refuted. We were prepared to closely cross-examine any witnesses which Mr. Kline might produce, and we had a number of additional witnesses of our own whom we intended to place on the stand if a defense was offered. None having been offered, however, we did not need any of the additional evidence we had in hand."

BERWIND WAS PRESENT.

Commission Was Not Ready To Examine Him.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Assurance of every assistance in its investigation were given the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day by E. J. Berwind, head of the Berwind-White Coal Mining Company.

Berwind and his brother, John E. Berwind, were present at to-day's session, and the latter was examined by Mr. Glasgow, who stated, however, that he was not yet ready to call Mr. Berwind. This was not pleasing to the latter, who said to the newspaper reporters that he returned from Europe for the express purpose of appearing before the committee, and had curtailed his trip for no other purpose.

The commission decided to suspend the investigation until next Tuesday, when it will be resumed in Washington, at which time Mr. Glasgow has requested the presence of Mr. Berwind.

KENTUCKIANS TO OPEN BANK IN ETOWAH, TENN.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 14.—[Special.]—Ike C. Adair, of Fordsville, Ky., and J. C. Cardwell, of Cecilia, Ky., have closed a deal with the real-estate department of the L. and N. Railroad Company for a lot in Etowah, Tenn., upon which they will erect a modern brick building and establish a bank. Etowah is the new town being promoted by the L. and N. Railroad Company on its Atlantic division, to which it is moving its entire shops from Blue Ridge, Ga. These shops will employ 1,200 men, and it is estimated that Etowah will have 5,000 inhabitants within twelve months. Over fifty brick business houses are now under contract.

MURDER OF LIEUTENANT REPORTED FROM MANILA.

Washington, June 14.—Gen. Wood cabled from Manila to the War Department under to-day's date as follows:

Yesterday's dispatch from Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, reports the murder of First Lieut. Edward C. Bolton and a citizen named Benjamin Christian on the night of June 6, about forty miles south of Davao.

Davao is a town situated on the Gulf of that name on the south side of the Island of Mindanao about 500 miles from Manila.

Brilliant Dinner

To Distinguished Guests—Former Governor and Mrs. Thomas T. Crittenden, of Missouri, Guests of Honor At a Dinner Given Last Night by Mrs. Geo. M. Davie.

One of the handsomest dinners ever given in Louisville was the one given last night by Mrs. George M. Davie at her home on Fourth avenue, in honor of former Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden and Mrs. Crittenden, of Kansas City, Mo.

The house was beautifully and elaborately decorated for the occasion in pink roses.

The large, round dining table was placed in the library, a spacious room thirty-seven by twenty-one feet.

An arch of electric lights led the way from the hall into the dining-room, and was hung with asparagus plumosa, white hydrangeas and crimson roses.

The magnificent silver service, which Mrs. Davie's father, the late Gen. William Preston, used when he was United States Minister to Spain, added greatly to the beautiful appearance of the table.

In the center stood the tall silver center piece filled with long-stemmed Madame Abel Champay roses, that reached to the chandelier, which was covered with asparagus plumosa to form a canopy above the table, and from which hung hundreds of the pink roses.

The lights were hooded in pink.

Forming a circle around the centerpiece stood a row of single silver candlesticks holding pink candles shaded in silver.

Around these was a circle of silver bonbon stands, holding pink favors, confections and marons glaces.

A third circle was formed of silver candelabra with pink candles with silver shades bordered with silver bead fringe.

All through the three circles at intervals were scattered boquets of Mme. Abel Champay roses tied with pink tulle of the same shade.

The place cards were white with the hostess' monogram in silver.

Mrs. Davie wore a handsome gown of Irish point lace, with tiny white roses forming a wreath around the corsage, and going into a plastron on the front of the bodice. She wore a white aigrette in her hair and beautiful pearl ornaments.

Mrs. Davie's guests were:

Former Gov. Thomas T. Crittenden and Mrs. Crittenden, of Missouri.
Former Vice President and Mrs. Stevenson.
Former Gov. David Francis and Mrs. Francis, of St. Louis.
Gov. J. C. W. Beckham and Mrs. Beckham.
Gen. Basil Duke,
Gen. J. Franklin Bell, of Washington, Chief of Staff, United States Army, and Mrs. Bell; Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner and Mrs. Buckner.
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Watterson.
Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Humphreys.
Mr. and Mrs. Houston Crittenden, of Kansas City;
Mr. Logan Murray.

A UNIQUE PRESENT FOR MR. WATTERSON.

Handsome Tribute From Three Ex-Kentuckians Resident In Oklahoma.

Mr. A. Z. McAninch, of Anadarko, Okla., called at the Courier-Journal office yesterday afternoon and presented to Mr. Henry Watterson a very handsome tribute from three ex-Kentuckians now resident at Anadarko. It consists of a buffalo horn mounted on green velvet, with a silver plate, bearing this inscription:

Presented to
HENRY WATTERSON
By Ex-Kentuckians
Judge Phelps, Capt. Hall and R. Z. McAninch.
Anadarko, Okla.

The horn was purchased from an Indian. It is intended to be nailed to a wall as a hat-holder. It is a unique and handsome souvenir.

Mr. McAninch is a native of Casey county, Ky. He left this State twenty-one years ago, went first to Indiana, then to Missouri, afterwards to Kansas, and finally to Oklahoma. He is the owner of the opera house in Anadarko. The other donors are also Kentuckians, who desired to come to Louisville, but were unable to leave home. Mr. McAninch will go on a visit to his native county before returning home.

ON THE FUNNY BONE.

The Willing Worker.

And now the fount begins to fizz,
A hissing sound you hear;
The druggist does a deal of biz
In gaseous atmosphere.
He gets the coin from you and me
And at his ease may loll.
The crafty druggist is, you see,
In partnership with Sol.

The druggist is the junior pard—
He has his plant complete;
But doesn't have to labor hard,
For Sol supplies the heat.
And so if you are out for pelf
(This is no fol-de-rol)
Accept the hint and get yourself
In partnership with Sol.

MEAT INSPECTION BILL WON'T DO

President So Tells Chairman Wadsworth.

Serious Defects Pointed Out To Committee.

Democrats Prepare a Strong Measure.

PACKERS SHOULD PAY COST.

Washington, June 14.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt to-day expressed entire disapproval of the new Meat Inspection Bill, as completed by the House Committee on Agriculture. He expressed this view to-day to Chairman Wadsworth, of the House committee, when Mr. Wadsworth called on him and submitted the draft of the new measure and asked the President's opinion. The President declared that the bill is not at all adequate to meet the conditions.

Representative Wadsworth, of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, had a conference late this afternoon with President Roosevelt, regarding the action of the House committee. He submitted to the President the substitute for the Beveridge amendment agreed upon by the committee. The President discussed the subject with Chairman Wadsworth for a time, indicating to him the specific points on which he disagreed with the majority of the House committee. He pointed out that the failure of the committee to provide for inspection at all hours, either of the day or of the night, was a defect which he could not pass, and he urgently disapproved also of the court review clause of the substitute. The President did not lay special stress on the proposition of the committee that the Government should pay the expenses of the inspection, although he feels that if the Government is required to pay the inspection charges the provision will render the law less effective than otherwise it would be.

* * *

Makes Written Explanation.

After his conference with Chairman Wadsworth, President Roosevelt wrote a letter to him, stating in a definite and formal way his objections to the substitute for the Beveridge amendment drafted by the House committee. It did not differ in any essential way from the statements made by the President to Mr. Wadsworth personally. The President wrote the letter, however, in order that his position might be distinctly understood and be of record. No copy of the letter was made public, the President preferring that for the present at least it should be in the hands of Chairman Wadsworth and his committee.

It is regarded as posssible by the President that Congress may enact the meat inspection law along the lines marked out by the House committee. If such a measure should be enacted, the President does not say he would not approve of it, but if he should sign it he would append to his signature a memorandum which would indicate definitely and unmistakably to the country that he regarded the law as inadequate and unsatisfactory.

* * *

The Minority View.

The minority report of the House Committee on Agriculture, which is expected to-morrow, will contain three main points of difference with the majority provision. These are:

First, that the cost should not be put on the Government; second, the court review; third, the waiving of the civil-service regulations for one year in the appointment of inspectors.

As to the cost provision the report will state that the appropriation of $2,000,000 can be justified only on two grounds—first, as a means of preserving the business of the packers, and, second, the protection of the health of the American people. The answer of the minority to the first is that the packers are well able to take care of themselves and should expect to pay the expenses incident to the preservation of their business. As to the second, if the packers have been the faulty ones in bringing about conditions requiring drastic remedies, they should be willing to bear the cost of the remedy.

The court-review amendment, according to the minority report, gives the right of review to the packers, but gives no such right to the Government, thereby creating a dangerous precedent.

The waiving of the civil-service regulations, it is contended, will fill the packing-houses with inspectors appointed by political influence which would handicap them as free agents.

* * *

Won't Discuss It.

After careful reflection Chairman Wadsworth decided that he will not discuss in any manner the objections of President Roosevelt to the meat-inspection amendment as reported to the House to-day. He will, however, refer the matter to his committee at a meeting to be called without delay, when the details of the objections which the President is understood to have pointed out will be considered.

In the majority report on the measure which Chairman Wadsworth filed in the House just before adjournment today, the statement is made that the public interest in the matter is fully appreciated; also its great importance to the business interests of the country as well as to the health of the people. These are also stated to be the reasons why the committee has given the subject "most painstaking and thoughtful consideration."

Commenting upon the wisdom of placing the cost of inspection on the Government the report says: "In recommending that the cost of inspection provided for in this measure be met by an appropriation from the public treasury, your committee have followed what they believe to be sound governmental policy and wise legislative practice.

"The men whose duty it will be to execute the provisions of this act will be Government officials and their salaries should be paid as are the salaries of all other officers—by all the people, and not by the special tax levied against a given interest. The proposition to create by a special tax on a single industry a large fund which shall be held at the disposal of an executive officer to be drawn upon at his discretion without legislative enactment seems to your committee to be an abdication on the part of Congress of one of its important functions."

* * *

People Should Not Pay.

Senator Beveridge, calling at the White House to-day, expressed the opinion that Congress would not adopt the meat inspection provision that has been reported by the House Committee on Agriculture.

"The funny part of it," said the Indiana Senator, "is that the House committee has retained all the features of my amendment that were pronounced unconstitutional and has added some more of the same sort. But any provision that the Government shall pay the cost of inspection will not be accepted. That would mean a victory for the packers, and they are not entitled to it. National banks pay the cost of examination and inspection by the creation of a fund for that purpose, and it is perfectly fair that packers shall do so. Nobody thinks for a minute that the money will come out of their pockets in the end. The people will have to pay it, as they do everything else."

Senator Beveridge takes a contrary view from the evidence submitted before the House Agricultural Committee. The stock men all over the country asserted that if the packers were forced to pay inspection bills they, the stock men, would in the end hold the bag. It was upon this evidence that Representative Trimble and two other Democrats on the committee voted in favor of the Government paying for the inspection. Then it is a question, and a serious one at that, whether the law would be constitutional if the Government attempted to compel the packers to pay the inspectors. The bill will finally go to conference for settlement.

DECORATION PRIZES.

FIRST HONOR GOES TO W. H. M'KNIGHT SONS & CO.

Courier-Journal Company's Building a Close Second.

Four winners of prizes offered for the best decorated business buildings for Home-coming Week and those given honorable mention were announced last night as follows:

First—W. H. McKnight, Sons & Co. building.

Second—Courier-Journal Company's building.

Third—Columbia Finance and Trust Company's building.

Fourth—Kellar building.

Honorable Mention—Levy Brothers' building, Vogel Brothers' building, Louisville Herald building and Kaufman-Straus Company's building.

In deciding on the awards the committeemen took into consideration the appearance of the decorations by day and night. It was thought that the decorations of the Courier-Journal building looked better than any others in the city at night, but that the decorations of the McKnight building surpassed all others in finish and completeness.

A large number of regularly draped flags and bunting graces the front of the building of W. H. McKnight, Sons & Co. The yellow enameled brick form an excellent background for the brilliant colors of the decoration.

The Courier-Journal Company's decorations are at their best at night. Festoons of electric lights are hung at intervals from the cornice in front of the windows on the fourth floor on both the Fourth-avenue and the Green-street sides. In illuminated letters the word "Welcome" stands out on the Fourth-avenue front, and the illuminated letters on the board bearing the picture of two clasped hands show the word "Shake." Two large flags are hung at the entrance on the corner.

The buildings in the block on Fourth avenue, between Green and Walnut streets, are brilliantly decorated. The dressing on the store of the John C. Lewis Company is tasteful and complete, the inside of the store being as carefully and as profusely hung with flags and bunting as is the exterior. Fred W. Keisker & Sons and J. Dolfinger & Co.'s stores are beautifully decorated.

GOV. LESLIE'S LEVEE.

CONSTANT STREAM OF CALLERS KEEPS HIM BUSY.

Famous Kentuckian One of the Happiest of Many Home Comers.

At his apartments at the Willard Hotel, where he is stopping this week ex-Gov. Preston N. Leslie has been holding almost a continual reception this week. Yesterday he visited the Armory and registered along with other returned Kentuckians, while he held quite a levee.

Mr. Leslie made a great sacrifice when he journeyed to Louisville to be with his old friends this week. Near eighty years old, naturally he is not the hale, hearty man he was years ago, but the love he bears for the State of which he once was the Chief Executive drew him again to its borders.

For many years Gov. Leslie had not visited Kentucky until last winter, when, wishing to mingle among old companions once again, he made the trip half across the continent. His reception here then was the most cordial, and by special invitation of the Legislature, which was in session at Frankfort at the time, he went to the State's capital and addressed the joint session.

At that time he was told of the proposed Kentucky Home Coming Week, and made the declaration that, health permitting, he would travel again to the Bluegrass State and greet the expected hosts. He is just a little the happiest old man that is within Louisville's borders to-day, for every expectation has been fulfilled. Hundreds of his admirers have called to greet him, and his honored figure, that of a man who has had the distinction of governing two States, is sought almost constantly.

BOYS AGAIN.

Banquet of Alumni of Centre and Central Colleges.

HON. ADLAI STEVENSON RESPONDS TO A TOAST.

GOV. BECKHAM, SENATOR M'CREARY AND OTHERS SPEAK.

ALMA MATER FIRST IN HEARTS.

Good fellowship held full sway around the banquet board at the Galt House last night when the sons of old Centre and the newer Central University met and talked informally of their college days. Old associations were renewed in spirit and all imagined themselves college boys again. They entered with vim and zest into college songs and college yells and told experiences of college days as if they were of the present. The graduate of the class of '55 sat next to the youngster who had received his diploma in 1904, and they were the same age, in thoughts if not in years, and the older "college boy" became young again, while the young man became old, to meet on an equal footing the gray-haired veteran.

No set speeches were made and the occasion was all the happier because of the impromptu nature of the addresses. The toasts were brimful of expressions of love for old Centre and its associations and were flavored with the sentiment of Kentucky and Home Coming. Men who had not seen one another since the days when they met on the old campus for the last time as college boys, just before they entered into the world to fight the battles of life, renewed their former friendship and related again the pranks which they had played on professors. From all parts of the country they came, all of them men who have attained distinction in the walks of life which they chose, and it was a representative assemblage of all that is best in the manhood of America as they sat around the table in the big dining-room. A. Y. Ford was in his happiest vein and in a most appropriate way he introduced each speaker and gave the sentiment to which he was to respond.

* * *

Home-Coming Feast.

The banquet was a Home-coming feast given by the Louisville and Kentucky alumni to the graduates of these institutions. The Louisville alumni chapter, which had charge of the entertainment, is an organization with many distinguished men on its rolls. A. Y. Ford is president, John W. Chandler first vice president and Dr. Herbert Bronner, secretary.

Short impromptu speeches were made by the following sons of Centre and Central Colleges: Former Vice President Adlai Stevenson; Allan G. Hall, Dean of Law Department of Vanderbilt University; former Gov. Thomas Crittenden; Gov. J. C. W. Beckham; Dr. F. W. Hinnitt, president of Central University; Senator James B. McCreary; R. W. Miller, of Richmond, Ky.; Dr. Willis Craig, president of the McCormick Seminary; the Rev. Dr. T. M. Hawes, Judge W. B. Fleming, Dr. L. S. McMurtry and other well-known alumni.

The menu was as follows:

Strawberries
Queen Olives Radishes Mints
Chicken Bouillon
Fried Soft Shell Crabs, Tomato Sauce
Potato Croquettes
Fillet Mignon, Braised, with Mushrooms
French Peas
Pineapple Sherbet
Combination Salad
Roquefort and Neufchatel Cheese Crackers

FAMILY REUNION.

DR. BRUNER HOST OF MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

Second Time That All Have Been Together.

Dr. Ben. L. Bruner, Chief Deputy United States Marshal in the office of George W. Long, in the Customhouse, is host this week to all the members of the family of which he is a member. This is the second time that all the members have been together at the same time. The other was at the death of their father, six years ago. Of the eight children, some were married and gone from home before the others were born.

The eight children and the mother, Mrs. Mary T. Bruner, of Durham, N. C., assembled yesterday at the home of Dr. Bruner, at 2541 West Walnut street, where they entertained at dinner. Neither the husbands of the girls nor the wives of the boys are at home, it being the desire of the family to make the affair strictly that of the family. The nine will remain with Dr. Bruner the remainder of the week, and then most of them will go to Clarkson, Grayson county, to the old homestead, where they are to attend the Grayson county Home Coming. Those who are with Dr. Bruner in the reunion are as follows:

Mrs. Mary T. Bruner, mother; Dr. Ben L. Bruner, host; Mrs. C. G. Head and Mrs. J. H. Bratchen, of Clarkson, Ky.; Mrs. B. B. Layman, Louisville; Mrs. A. R. Tucker, Durham, N. C.; the Rev. Dr. Austin Bruner, of Washington, D. C.; Dr. H. C. Bruner, of Hardyville, Ky.; Eli Murray Bruner, of Georgetown, Ky.

HART COUNTY CLUB WELCOMES NATIVE SONS WITH RECEPTION

Renewing of Old Ties Blocks Programme and President Just Lets Them Talk.

It looked for a while as if everybody was a native of Hart county last night when people crowded into the lobby of the Masonic Theater to attend the reception given to Hart-county "Home Comers" by the Hart County Club, of Louisville. The lobby was almost crowded to the doors, because people came so much faster than the elevator man could take care of them, and people who tried to get into the show that was given at the theater last night were almost unable to get to the box-office. As it was, more than 50 0people attended the reception, and the commandery rooms on the sixth floor of the Masonic building, where the reception was given, was a reproduction of the Armory on a smaller scale.

The committee of the Hart County Club had arranged a good programme, and got through with the first three or four numbers of it, when it was decided to abandon the rest of it, as people who had not seen each other for so long had so much to say to each other that no time was left to listen to the speakers. The exercises were opened by "My Old Kentucky Home," sung by a choir composed of members of the club. Cheers and wet eyes marked the conclusion of the song, which was done in beautiful fashion, the accompaniment being supplied by the string band which performed all the evening.

The assembly was called to order by the president of the club, Dr. O. F. Nuckols, of Louisville, who introduced Col. Isaac T. Woodson, of Louisville, a member of the club, who welcomed the Home Comers. Col. Woodson abstained, he said, although nobody noticed it, from getting eloquent, alluding to a time when he and Dr. C. J. Walton, of Munfordville, who responded for Hart county, were stumping their county in a race made by them for office.

Dr. C. J. Dalton, of Munfordsville, formerly State Pension Agent, and one of the best-loved men in Hart county, was received with prolonged cheers when he rose to speak. Dr. Walton is eighty-three years of age and is not so strong, nor is his voice as firm as once.

"I am proud of this assembly," he said. "I am proud of this occasion; I am proud of being a citizen of Hart county, that grand old county surpassed by but few in the State. * * * Hart county produces the usual products of Kentucky—grain and leaf and the most beautiful set of women that God Almighty ever made."

At the conclusion of Dr. Walton's address, Miss Laila Nuckols, daughter of Dr. Nuckolls, played a well-executed piano solo, after which her father, who had been beating vainly with his cane in an endeavor to persuade all to listen to the speakers, announced that it was the pleasure of its guests the club sought and invited them to do as they desired and as long as they desired. His announcement was received with applause and more Home Comers got together and talked and talked in strenuous effort to renew memories of days gone by. Men and women, young and old, some of them wearing badges showing that they had come nearly all the way across the continent to attend Home-coming made each other's acquaintance and enjoyed themselves thoroughly until late. Refreshments were served.

The reception given to Hart county Home Comers was unique in all the celebrations of the week. The Hart County Club was organized last fall and now has a membership of 125. The officers are Dr. Nuckols, president, and Miss Bernice Perkins, secretary.

ORDERED TO CLOSE

United States Marine Hospital In Louisville.

TELEGRAM RECEIVED FROM SECRETARY SHAW.

SHERLEY'S AMENDMENT WILL INSURE OLD SERVICE.

SUSPENSION ONLY TEMPORARY

The United States Marine Hospital, at Twenty-third and High streets, may be closed the last of the month. The Marine Hospital has been a fixture in Louisville for probably more than fifty years and the grounds are looked upon as one of the most beautiful and attractive spots in the city. While the main building is rather old in appearance, yet the grounds, covering a space of two blocks one way and one block another, are attractive in every way.

The order to close the hospital came in a telegram to Dr. Benjamin W. Brown, assistant surgeon and officer in charge, from Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury. The telegram gave no particulars other than the closing of the hospital was decided upon as a means of economy. The hospitals at Evansville, Ind.; Wilmington, Del.; St. Louis, Mo.; Cairo, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn., and Vineyard, Mass, it is understood, have also been ordered closed.

Dr. Brown has received orders that all patients coming from boats licensed by the Government shall be taken to the City Hospital or some other hospital where arrangements have been made for caring for Government patients. He will give the patients the attention as usual, but the board and expense for their care shall be paid by the Government. He says that the Government does not intend to quit caring for patients from licensed boats, but simply has decided to reduce expenses by having them cared for at hospitals maintained at the expense of the city or private corporation.

Under Dr. Brown at the hospital are Dr. J. T. Ewing, acting assistant surgeon; L. P. Hall, pharmacist, and ten or more other helpers around the hospital in various capacities. Dr. Brown said last night that the average number of patinets on hand all the time was about fifteen. Dr. Brown maintains an office in the Board of Trade building in order that he may examine patients as they are landed at the wharf by the steamers. This office will still be maintained, but all patients will be carried wherever the Government designates.

SHERLEY INTERVENES.

Amendment Insures Continuation of Hospitals.

Washington, June 14.—Secretary Shaw has written a letter ordering the closing of marine hospitals at Louisville, Memphis, Cairo, St. Louis, Evansville, Wilmington and Vineyard Yard, but the hospitals may not be closed. The letter was written several days ago, although this was not known when Representative Sherley got through an amendment to the Sundry Civil Bill looking to the prevention of such action. It is Mr. Sherley's contention that under the existing laws the hospitals cannot be closed and left idle while patients are transferred to general hospitals. The House after long discussion inclined to Mr. Sherley's views and adopted his amendment. The letters were then in the mails. It is believed that the amendment will be adopted by the Senate. In the meantime there is a question as to whether Secretary's Shaw's order will be put into effect. The alleged objection of the order is to save expenses, but Surgeon General Wyman says that nothing would be saved.

VISITORS CROWD JAIL.

ENTER MERELY AS GUESTS AND NOT PRISONERS.

Murderer's Row Chief Object of Interest—Many Compliments Heard.

"The Jefferson county jail is certainly one of the finest I have ever seen," said one of the Home Comers from Missouri yesterday afternoon after he had gone through the place with several others of his delegation. "For equipment, accommodation, security and thoroughly up-to-date arrangement I think that it can compare favorably with any other of its kind in the country."

The jail was crowded from morning until night with visitors, all of whom showed the greatest interest in the large structure. It was estimated that several hundred Home Comers passed through the visitors' entrance. They were accompanied by the keepers, who showed them through the cellhouse and pointed out the "murderers' row." All of them, especially the women, took great interest in Clarence Sturgeon, who shot three men to death Wednesday afternoon, and he in turn regarded his viewers with great unconcern and coolness, jesting with some of them.

Many expressions of admiration at the large structure were heard, and many went so far as to say that the Jefferson county jail is one of the largest and best equipped in the country. Those who remembered the old jail were especially pleased to find the great improvement, and went over to look at the old site, where the old jail is being rapidly demolished. The visitors were accompanied by little children, who also evinced great interest in the whole proceedings.

Constipation and Its Causes.

A Well-Known Remedy.

Constipation is one of man's worst enemies, and half the bodily ills we suffer from are a result thereof. Nature meant that the bowels should be kept free and open—that we should have a free movement at least once a day. Of course, we ourselves are to a large extent responsible for our troubles by failure to observe Nature's laws. Our habits are irregular, we eat improper food with undue haste, and when we find our bowels do not move, have resort to powerful drugs and medicines, which are so drastic in their action that, although they may purge at first, they damage the tender lining of the stomach and bowels so as to leave a worse condition than before. And why take such injurious and expensive drugs when we can obtain from any druggist, much cheaper, a bottle of Nature's own remedy, the famous Mineral Laxative Water—HUNYADI JANOS—bottled at the spring in Hungary; in use nearly half a century. One dose, ½ a tumblerful, drunk on arising in the morning (slightly warmed for best results) will bring within an hour a refreshing movement—gentle, natural and thorough—without any griping or purging or other bad effects. A whole bottle costs but a trifle. Keep one always on hand. At all druggists.

OVER THE CITY

Sailed Capt. Baldwin In His Airship.

NOT DIRIGIBLE BECAUSE OF THE WIND.

ALIGHTED IN A FIELD NEAR UTICA, IND.

WILL MAKE ANOTHER TRIP.

Like a huge yellow bird, Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin's airship flew through space in the neighborhood of Brook and Breckinridge streets last evening. The ascent was made at 6:47 o'clock and Capt. Baldwin and his machine were carried by an adverse wind across the Ohio river to a point twelve miles east of Jeffersonville and three miles north of tica, Ind. He alighted in a field near the home of W. P. Bottorff. The balloon was deflated, placed aboard an automobile and returned to Louisville. Capt. Baldwin will make another ascent Saturday and will try to sail over the central part of Louisville and return to the starting point.

For days the Louisville public and Home Comers have been waiting to see Capt. Baldwin make a test of his machine. The clerk in charge of the information bureau at the Armory has been kept busy answering questions relative to when the airship would make its initial trial. Pinkney Varble, chairman of the Concessions Committee, has been on the carpet before the chief executives of Home Coming time and again, and on each occasion he explained that the atmospheric conditions were not right.

All day yesterday Capt. Baldwin watched the weather, and during the afternoon he reached the conclusion that he would set all for the City Hall, leaving the lot at Brook and Breckinridge streets at 6 o'clock.

Despite the short time intervening between the announcement and the time set for the exhibition, several hundred persons gathered about Capt. Baldwin and his airship to see him off. The great yellow balloon was inflated, and weighted to the ground with sand bags. A score of men were busily engaged about the machine, adjusting ropes and pulleys, adding new ballast and looking after different parts of the mechanism.

Casting an anxious glance in the direction of a line of smoke which was being carried to the northeast at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour, Capt. Baldwin expressed the fear that he would not be able to steer his machine against the wind. He said that his airship had a speed of about eight miles an hour, and that when he encountered a wind that was blowing at a greater rate of speed he was unable to make progress against it. He waited forty-seven minutes over the scheduled time for making the start, in the hope that the wind would abate.

Resembling a thing of life, the huge balloon pulled and tugged at the cords that held it in restraint.

Aeronaut Unconcerned.

Of those who were gathered about to see Capt. Baldwin off none was more unconcerned or appeared calmer than himself. He was attired in regular street costume, including his coat and derby hat. As he placed himself astride the boat-shaped frame, which constitutes the car of his airship, he leaned forward and asked an urchin in the crowd of spectators if he had a spare cake of chewing gum.

After seeing that every bolt was tight and the rudder ropes were working properly, Capt. Baldwin shook hands with Capt. Varble, shouted goodbye to those about him, and ordered his assistants to "cut her loose."

Like a rocket the airship bounded forward and upward at an angle of forty-five degrees. The bow was pointed directly east, but in a twinkling Capt. Baldwin brought the airship about until she was sailing in a northwesterly direction.

"He will get hung up on the telegraph wires," one man excitedly cried. The huge yellow balloon was making directly for the wires, and it looked for a moment as though the evil prophesy was justified. It was for only a moment that the crowd was in doubt, however, as Capt. Baldwin proved himself for the time being a complete master of the machine. He threw his weight backward until the ship assumed an almost perpendicular position and sped over the topmost telegraph wire without so much as grazing it.

From the first it could be seen that the wind was carrying the machine in a direction contrary to that previously mapped out by Capt. Baldwin. After he had attained height of several thousand feet, he attempted to tack back, but the current of air proved too strong. When his assistants saw that he was being carried further and further away by the adverse current they sprang into an automobile and started in pursuit of the air ship.

When Capt's Baldwin's friends reached him at 9 o'clock last night he was standing by his machine, calmly smoking a cigar and explaining the mechanism to a crowd of wondering spectators.

"I struck an adverse current," said Capt. Baldwin last night, "and was unable to beat my way back against it. I made several fruitless attempts and finally decided I had better keep on with the wind until I found a place suitable for a descent. I was not the least nervous. I was never in danger, and nothing about the machine got out of order. I feel very well pleased with my sail."

LATONIA, Ky., June 14.—[Special.]—The inclement weather of the last two days caused the blue pencil to be used freely on the card offered at Latonia this afternoon. Thirty-one scratches adorned the board on account of the deep going. Form reversals were evident in two of the races. One in particular was that in which Dainty Dame, a filly which was heavily backed a few days ago and failed to show in the money, won under wraps. It is probable, however, that Dainty Dame had more of a fondness for the mud than the other youngsters in the race in which she started. Tocolaw, which ruled the favorite in the mile handicap, the feature of the card, and was backed for thousands of dollars, could hardly raise a respectable gallop, and finished outside of the money. Tocolaw's race is unaccountable for he is known to be a veritable bearcatcher in soft going. It is probable, though, that his colored owner will furnish a good alibi should he be called to account for the showing of his sprinter.

Judge Price, who has been the presiding judge here and at the meetings in Nashville, Lexington and Louisville, will leave for Windsor, Canada, to-morrow night, where he will occupy the same position there. Turfmen here in general express their regrets at the departure of this most competent official. During the troubled state of the turf in the West Judge Price has stood as a monument of integrity and uprightness, and his rulings stand pre-eminent and alone. While ruling with a rod of iron, he nevertheless is democratic enough to listen to the troubles of the man with one horse with equal spirit and justness as he does to the man with the million-dollar string. By following the method he has endeared himself to horsemen and public alike, the former being sure of fairness, while the latter could always rely on having justice and protection dealt out from the stand. Once more the presence of Judge Charles F. Price will be missed from Latonia.

Balbert was bid up $400 over his entered price of $900, and retained by his owner with the usual advance of $5.

Austin's Ride Wins.

The day's opener, which was at a mile, brought twelve ordinary platers before Starter Holtman, of which the hard luck horse Interlight was again made a 7 to 5 favorite, with Stroud, mainly because he had Dale Austin, the colored rider, in the pilot house, a lukewarm second choice. Those who strung along with the latter trick had the correct dope, as Stroud, which was returned the winner, owed his victory to the rider. He was the only horse in the race to be gotten off well in motion, the usual jam having avoided, Dainty Dame, which always occurs at the first turn. In the scramble to-day it seemed almost inevitable that two or three must go down, for at least that number made the turn two lengths being literally carried around by the balance of the field, which was a congested mass. The favorite was well supported by the talent, who thought that the Greenberg horse had at least dropped into a spot where he could break his hard luck streak, but being handicapped by drawing the rail position and a poor post rider he was jammed back when the start came again rounding the first turn, and although he made a game effort going down the back stretch, could never get to the leaders and dropped back beaten turning for home. Neodesha, which broke well in motion, showed the way to the final furlong, where Austin, who had given Stroud a perfect ride, sent the old Freeknight plater up with a rush and taking command won with something in reserve. Neodesha held on long enough to get the place from Bugler, which closed a world of ground, after experiencing the worst kind of racing luck.

Dainty Dame Shows Reversal.

The second brought together eight very speedy misses, of which Mattie Mack, from the barn of S. J. Hughes & Son, was installed favorite at 7 to 5 in the opening betting, but so persistently did the wise money flow in on A. L. Darnaby's likely looking daughter of Handspring, Dainty Dame, that the favorite's price soared to 2 to 1, while the price about the latter receded from 3 to 5 to 2 to 1. When it came to the running Dainty Dame made her field look cheap, breaking like an old timer she raced her field all ere they had gone a half, and although plainly not favoring the going, won eased up by three lengths from Mattie Mack, which was a like distance in front of Lady Arion. The race of the winner stood out in bold relief over her previous race, and justified the severe criticism offered in these columns of Jockey Obert's ride. In her last race she was supported for a good thing, and had she won several books would have been scorched for thousands of dollars, but as was stated at the time the ride which Obert gave her was off color. Although put on the carpet for the ride and given the "third degree," Obert maintained his innocence, and being unable to find the goods on the lad, the judges had to let the performance go. However, all things have an ending, and unless Obert mends his ways and does so in the very immediate future, he will get himself in a jam the proportions of which will startle even him.

Ralbert Comes To Life.

Charlie McCafferty furnished the winner of the third race, which was at six furlongs, and which brought together nine very ordinary sprinters. In the betting the race was a very open one with very liberal prices being laid against everything in the race. Roscoe on his last performance, which was in the mud, was played for a real good thing at 6s while Ralbert received the support of those who sleep with a dope book in their hand. That those who burn the midnight oil had their coin on the right horse was proven by the running, as the way the race was run Ralbert had to be much the best to win. As good as left when the start came, he raced everything into submission at different stages of the journey and finally hooking up with Roscoe in the run home he drew away from the latter as if he were tied. The latter horse was off winging, and setting a sizzling pace hooked real dangerous rounding the far turn, but he hung very badly under pressure. The race of the winner was a vast improvement of his previous effort and was severely criticised, and it is not unlikely that McCafferty will be asked to explain the sudden reversal of form of this one.

Tocolaw Fails To Deliver.

The fourth, which was the day's feature, saw the third favorite of the day fall by the wayside. With seventeen pounds off his corking good race yesterday, Tocolaw was played as if it were all over but the shouting, but the Madison trick displayed his usual tendency of first to-day and last to-morrow, especially when the price is not a healthy one. When prices were posted the books took no liberties with Tocolaw and the 3 to 2 laid against his chances was eagerly gobbled up, which forced the price to 6 to 5. Gus Heidorn at 5's was next in demand, and although everyone felt that the Arthur trick was only in there for a "prep" for the Queen City Handicap, which will be decided Saturday, they could not very well figure how this one would be worse than second and he was accordingly plunged on. Concert had a good following out on the limb, with Kerchenval Bros. also interested, and Fischer going practically neglected. Off well in motion Concert was first to show, attended by Tocolaw, but, although receiving a hustling ride from Otis, the Madison trick pinned his ears back and would not try a lick, dropping back beaten before a quarter was traversed. Concert took up the running, and assuming a commanding lead of a length and a half rounding the far turn looked all over the winner turning for home, but Preston, who had the leg up, took the Contestor mare down into the heaviest going while Devout, which E. Robinson had carefully nursed in the early stages, took to the path and after a slight shaking up wrestled the leadership from Concert, winning rather handily by a length and a half. Gus Heidorn, although swerving badly the turn home, got up in time to nip the fast tiring Concert out of the place.

Lexoline a Speedy Filly.

The fifth, which was at five furlongs for the youngsters, afforded the talent another peep at William Gerst's Zal, which, until he met defeat in the Harold Stakes Tuesday, was thought to be a corker. To-day he was asked to concede pounds to everything in the race except Woolma. Notwithstanding this, the books always held the Gerst trick a prohibitive favorite at even money or thereabouts. The burden was too much and, although responding to punishment gamely in the last furlong, Zal was not good enough to beat the winner, which turned up in J. McDonald's black daughter of Lackford, Lexoline, which just at the present time seems to be a bearcatcher. The books took the liberty of laying 15 to 1 against her. Breaking none too well, Lexoline raced Judge Treen, which was the pacemaker, into submission, and then, displacing superior speed, drew away again when Old Honesty made his determined bid in the final furlong. The latter was in very close quarters entering the final furlong, but for which he might have been a more serious contender. Zal just managed to save the short end of the purse in a hard drive from Judge Treen, which came again under punishment.

Daniel C. Finally Wins.

The sixth, which was at one and one-eighth miles, and run at buggy horse pace, was, nevertheless, productive of a real spanking, blanket finish, with the winner turning up in Daniel C., which had been thrown in with a feather of 96 pounds. In the betting the play was about equally divided about the chances of Daniel C., Double and Adesso, the latter always ruling a slight favorite. When the start came, The Mate flashed into a lead, with Adesso at his throat-latch, while the winner was jammed back in the race for positions. In the run down the back stretch Daniel C. picked up his field one by one and, running over the leaders rounding the far turn as if they were tied, assumed command turning for home and was never thereafter in trouble. Double kept too far out of it the first part; closed strong in the run home, but could not quite get up.

* * *

Gauze Makes Good.

The closing race of the day went to the heavily-backed favorite Gauze, which, after being the runner-up to the far turn, drew on even terms with Tinker, which had been the early pacemaker, and, after racing him into submission, turning for home, drew away, winning rather cleverly by a length and a half from Pinaud, which, after being outrun badly in the early stages, closed strong with a belated rattle, and was Roig strongest of all at the finish. The Gadfly, which had been played into a lukewarm second choice, managed to get up in time to drop into the three-hole.

WOMAN FAINTS FROM HEAT IN BIG CROWD.

Miss Grace Speed, twenty-six years of age, of 214 West Chestnut street, died of gastritis at the City Hospital yesterday afternoon. She was taken violently ill in the morning and suffered intensely until her death. The fact that she died within twenty-four hours after her admission to the hospital caused the authorities to notify the Coroner, who decided that death was due to natural causes. She is survived by her father, James Speed. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Dr. Scheinfeld a Guest.

Among the Home Comers who arrived yesterday was the Rev. Dr. M. L. Scheinfeld, formerly of this city, the founder of the Louisville Zionistic societies. He will be given a reception by the local bodies of Zionists, and will deliver several lectures on that subject.

Stroud owed his victory to Austin, who gave him a perfect ride; off well in motion, he laid away from the pace and, closing with a rattle in the final furlong, won going away. Neodesha had the foot of the party in the early stages, but Perkins was of little assistance when the pinch came. Dr. Turner closed fast from a poor beginning. Eular's race was up to the notch. Dr. Burch was knocked to his knees rounding the first turn, as was also Bugler. Interlight had bad racing luck.

254—SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs; purse $400; two-year-old fillies. Start good. Won easily; place same. Winner, A. L. Darnaby & Co.'s br. f., by Handspring—My Fair Kentucky; trained by A. L. Darnaby. Value to winner, $300. Fractional time: :24 3-5, :51 3-5, :58 2-5.

The winner, under a different rider, displayed remarkable improvement; up on her toes when the start came she raced her field dizzy the first half, winning with plenty in reserve. Mattie Mack forced the early pace, but was not good enough to beat the winner. Lady Arion, under a slovenly ride, just lasted long enough to beat Quiddity, which closed with a rush after being as good as left. Little Wanda was left.

255—THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; purse $400; for four-year-olds and upward; selling. Start bad. Won easily; place same. Winner, C. McCafferty's b. g., 4, by Albert—Emily R.; trained by owner. Value to winner, $300. Fractional time: :24 3-5, :50 3-5, 1:18 1-5.

The winner was best. Raced Tinker into submission going down the back; opened up a winning lead rounding the far turn and was never thereafter threatened. Pinaud, badly outrun in the early stages, closed strong with a belated rattle. The Gadfly ran in close pursuit the entire distance, and had no apparent excuses. Tinker quit all over after going three-quarters. Evie Greene had no excuses.

256—FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs; purse $600; for three-year-olds and upward; free handicap. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, P. Dunne's ch. c., 4, by Piety—Aggie Marden; trained by F. Hanlon. Value to winner, $450. Fractional time: :25, :51, 1:19.

Robinson laid off the early pace with the winner and, picking his going turning for home, easily disposed of Concert, and winning with something in reserve. Gus Heidorn, outrun early, came wide turning for home, but dropped into the places when Concert chucked it up. The latter quit all over when the pinch came. Last two were evidently in for a "prep" for Saturday's race. Heidorn was worked out an extra quarter.

257—FIFTH RACE—Five furlongs; purse $400; for three-year-old colts and geldings. Start fair. Won easily; place same. Winner, J. McDonald's blk. c., Lackford—Mettle O. Trained by W. Wells. Value to winner $300. Time, :24 2-5, :52, 1:06.

The winner displayed superior speed and gameness. Raced Judge Treen off his feet the first quarter then had plenty left, when Old Honesty made his determined stretch challenge. The latter was in tight quarters the whole of the final furlong, and was kept in the deep going throughout. Zal had no apparent excuses. Judge Treen had early speed, came again at the end under punishment.

Double kept too far out of the first part was not equal to the occasion when let down. Adesso was prominent in the early stages, but stopped badly last quarter. J. K. F. went well.

259—SEVENTH RACE—One mile; purse $400; for three-year-olds and up; selling. Start bad. Won easily; place driving. Winner, J. K. Baker's ch. c., 3, Renssalaer—Grenadine. Trained by owner. Value to winner $300. Time, :26, :52 3-5, 1:20, 1:49 3-5.

BIG TRACT

Belonging To Dulaney Heirs Changes Hands.

LARGEST UNIMPROVED SECTION IN LOUISVILLE.

R. E. TENNANT BUYS BECAUSE OF BELIEF IN CITY.

NEGOTIATIONS OF MONTHS.

The largest deal in unimproved real estate ever made in Louisville was completed yesterday when the deeds were filed for record in the County Clerk's office whereby the Dulaney heirs conveyed to R. S. Tennant, representing the Tennant Land Company, the tract of land bounded by Eighteenth and Twenty-sixth streets and Garland avenue and Dumesnil street. This property probably has the unique distinction of being the largest tract of unimproved real estate that ever within the confines of a city's limits remained intact for so many years that the town was completely built up in all directions about it. The property is being platted and will be placed on the market immediately for residence purposes. It consists of forty city blocks, or about 160 acres. It is understood that the price was in the neighborhood of $300,000.

Besides the streets included between Eighteenth and Twenty-sixth there will be included within its limits the following streets, running parallel to Garland avenue and Dumesnil street: Date street, Kentucky street, Greenwood avenue, Grand avenue, Osage avenue, Bismarck and Oak streets. The surveyors are already at work laying out the streets and the work of crowning them will be begun in a few days. The paving and curbing will be left to the property owners. According to the method of subdivision being used there will be 1,234 lots, each 30x135 feet. The streets bounding this plot are supplied with water mains and gas pipes and cross connections will be made as soon as necessary for the purchasers of lots in this subdivision.

Long In Negotiation.

Several attempts in recent years have been made to secure about sixty acres of this property for park purposes, but the plan was never carried out.

R. S. Tennant, the purchaser of the property, is a resident of Terre Haute, Ind., and has large real estate holdings in various parts of the country. He is a coal operator with large interests in the coal fields of Central Indiana. He is greatly pleased with the consummation of the negotiations for this property in which he has been engaged for about five months. Mr. Tennant is a lawyer, but has abandoned the practice to devote his time to his land holdings. He is enthusiastic over the Delta region in Mississippi and Louisiana, which he compares in richness of soil and greatness of its possibilities for agricultural purposes to the valley of the Yellow river in China. He believes that this property has a greater future for the farmer than any other spot in the country and that if farmed on an extensive scale it would rival any section in the great West. Mr. Tennant says that people are not alive to the possibilities of this soil, which has been produced by the overflow of the Mississippi at its mouth and has been rendered cultivatable by the improvements made in the way of dykes and levees built by the United States Government.

Part of Great Ownings.

The section of the Dulaney estate which has just been sold is only a small portion of the land holdings of the late W. H. Dulaney, who, at his death was probably worth more than one million dollars in real estate alone. Other large tracts owned by him were on Seventh and Kentucky streets, part of which is now occupied by the baseball park, and a tract on the Grand boulevard with a frontage of 6,000 or 8,000 feet. He was also deeply interested in Main-street property and had smaller holdings in other parts of the city. His heirs are Mrs. Albert S. Willis, Mrs. Judson Clemens, Miss May Dulaney, Henrietta Dulaney, the daughter of the late Hector Dulaney, and Woodford H. Dulaney, the son of the late Robert D. Dulaney. The two last named comprise the infant interests which have partially stood in the way of the consummation of former sales of this land. Their interests, in order to make this sale possible, were sold at the courthouse steps a few days ago at commissioner's sale and the closing of this deal that has been made for the property was dependent upon the real estate men who negotiated the trade, securing this property at an agreed price. Green & Currey, local real estate men, made the sale.

R. S. Tennant, the new owner of the property, said yesterday: "I have great faith in the future of real estate investments, especially in a growing city like Louisville and throughout the South. It seems to me that Louisville has just begun to grow and I certainly see for it a great future. Kentucky and some of the other Southern States are unsurpassed in natural resources by any place in the universe. The mineral wealth of this section has hardly begun to be appreciated and scarcely at all developed. As an agricultural section, with proper development, the South should outstrip the world."

PASSENGER TRAIN JUMPS THE TRACK.

Fireman Fatally Hurt—Smoking Car Overturned, But Sixty Occupants Escape.

Cincinnati, June 14.—The southbound passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad, which is due in this city at 7:30 p. m., jumped the track at Elba, eighteen miles north of here, while going at the rate of forty miles an hour. The engine, baggage car and tender all went over an embankment and the balance of the train rolled on the side. Engineer Vaughan was badly scalded and may die, and Fireman Sheckles was internally injured and will die. J. J. Maroney, of Marietta, O., was badly cut with glass. The smoking car, with sixty passengers, was overturned, but no one was seriously injured. The ladies' coach also left the track, but no one was hurt. An investigation shows that a spike had been driven into the rails and welded, which was the cause of the accident.

RIVER, BUSINESS AND WEATHER.

DRIFTWOOD.

The City of Louisville is the Cincinnati boat Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. She will carry a big crowd up to meet the City of Cincinnati seventy-five miles above here, and return on her in the evening.

THE WHISTLE SIGNALS.

I am a vessel, called a steamboat sometime,
This to my whistle, I give it in rhyme.
Five little short ones, there is danger, you see,
Three little short ones we blow for a call,
Come to the river bank, we may need you all;
While two long blasts in day or in night,
Is for to pass to the left, and not to the right.
One long blast as we come together
Is to pass to the right, in all kinds of weather.
The pilot and two shorts for a pilot, a man
With plenty of knowledge, nerve and sand.
The short, long and short, the sounds that I want a fireman who can make plenty of steam.
But there is another, three short little blast,
Good health in the future, kind thoughts of the past.
Last, but not least, the long, short and long,
I want a deckhand, healthy and strong.
The pleasures and hardships they have in store,
Be banished forever, God pity the poor.

W. J. DUFFY.

TERM OF APPELLATE COURT ABOUT NORMAL.

LOWER COURT REVERSED 101 TIMES, HOWEVER.

WIFE ASKS $10,000 ALIMONY.

Frankfort, Ky., June 14.—[Special.]—At the April term of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, which closed yesterday afternoon, 280 cases were disposed of, which, together with the 339 disposed of at the January term, make a total of 628 cases decided within six months. This is an average record for the court. The adjournment was until Monday, September 17 next.

Of the 289 cases disposed of at the term just ended, 165 were affirmances of lower courts, 101 were reversals, 22 were appeals dismissed, and one was an opinion certified for information of the lower tribunal.

Under the new revenue law, the tax on appeals to the Court of Appeals will be $2 instead of $1, as heretofore. The Assembly doubtless thought this would be a revenue-producer in a small way for the State, but, under the law governing the collection of such taxes, the money collected goes into the Library fund of the State.

The city license authorities are now making preparations to enforce the collection of licenses from the lawyers of the city, following the recent decision of the Court of Appeals which sustained the city ordinance requiring members of the bar to be licensed. Two years ago the city authorities caused the arrest of a number of lawyers for refusing to pay the tax, but when the prisoners were taken before City Judge Riley they contended that the tax was illegal and took an appeal to the Appellate Court. As the ordinance was adopted in 1901 the city authorities will insist on the payment of three years' licenses, which at $10 per year will aggregate $30 for each member of the Lexington bar.

BAD CHECKS

Given By a Man In Jeffersonville.

WILLIAM C. LEWIS REFUSED TO TALK WHEN ARRESTED.

MODERN WOODMEN WILL GIVE UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

OFFER TWENTY-FIVE PRIZES.

Sergt. J. J. Kendall, of the Jeffersonville police force, late last evening arrested a well-dressed man who gave his name as William C. Lewis, at the store of E. M. Lindley on the charge of attempting to pass a worthless check for $15 that had the name of John D. Ingram attached to it. Mr. Ingram is manager of the Jeffersonville plant of the American Car and Foundry Company and his signature was known at the store. It was also known that the man was wanted for passing a worthless check for the same amount on Samuel W. Taylor, who keeps a saloon at 435 Spring street. He is known to have been at another place, but no more have so far been reported.

The visit to Taylor's was made on Tuesday evening and there the fellow purchased two drinks, which he paid for, but before he left the place he ordered a third and said he had been at a fishing camp and was out of money. He asked Taylor if he would cash a check for $5, and Taylor said he would. A check on the First National Bank of Jeffersonville, with the date line changed to read Louisville, was tendered. This was made payable to cash or order and was signed William C. Lewis, agent. On the back of the paper the customer indorsed it with the name Thomas C. James. The check was deposited for collection in the First National Bank of Jeffersonville Wednesday, but Taylor was afterward notified that W. C. Lewis had no money there. It so happened that William C. Lewis, who was formerly an insurance agent in Jeffersonville, was in the city and the check was shown to him, but he denied knowing anything about it. For some reason Taylor did not report the case, but Sergt. Kendall heard of it and went to see Taylor. Two hours later Lewis was under arrest.

Before going to see Taylor Mrs. W. F. Davis, who keeps a confectionery at 117 West Court avenue, reported to Sergt. Kendall that on the previous night a stranger had come into her store and made a purchase of fifty cents' worth of cakes. He threw down what purported to be a check for $5, but it was not signed. The customer's attention was called to this and he laughed, saying that was a great joke, but he would give W. P. Reilley to sign it. Reilley keeps a hotel and the customer said the cakes were for him and took them along. Yesterday morning he returned and told Mrs. Davis he had come back the previous night, but the store was closed. He then paid for the cakes in cash and went away. When arrested last evening the suspect, Lewis would not talk about himself or give any explanation of his conduct, and it is not even known where he has been staying or how long he has been in Jeffersonville. He insists his name is W. C. Lewis, however. The penalty for obtaining money on a fraudulent check in Indiana is a fine in any sum from $100 to $5,000, to which may be added imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years.

CRITICAL PERIOD FOR FIRE COMPANIES

KENTUCKY AGENTS DISCUSS HOW TO PREVENT LOSS.

OFFICERS FOR ENSUING YEAR ELECTED.

MEET IN COVINGTON NEXT.

The Kentucky Association of Fire Insurance Agents met yesterday in the eleventh annual convention of that organization. The meeting was held in room 37 Kenyon Building. About seventy-five members of the association attended the sessions, which were held both in the morning and afternoon. It was originally announced that the convention would last two days, meeting only in the forenoon. This plan, however, was changed on account of the postponement of the floral parade.

Alfred Pirtle, president of the association, presided over the meeting. The address of welcome was made by Howard W. Hunt.

At both the morning and afternoon sessions interesting discussions of a technical nature were held. An especially interesting informal speech was made by C. N. Benjamin. An address by Young E. Allison was listened to with marked attention. It dealt with the relations between the companies and their agents. He spoke of the "trained representatives safeguarding the companies' interests at this time, which he characterized as the most critical in their history, owing to the great losses in the last few months. A severe fire loss in the near future, he declared, could be nothing less than a great disaster to any company and the agent, in his confidential capacity with the company, could do much to protect it.

The usual committees were appointed for the ensuing year. It was decided to leave the selection of the time and place of the next meeting to the Executive Committee and the president as an ex-officio member. It is probable that Covington will be the next meeting place, as an invitation to meet there was extended and most of the delegates seemed to favor its selection.

New officers were elected as follows: Henry V. Davis, of Louisville, president; George A. Armstrong, of Shelbyville, first vice president; Fred Hummel, of Louisville, secretary and treasurer. The retiring officers were: Alfred Pirtle, president, of Louisville; George A. Armstrong, first vice president, of Shelbyville, and H. Clay McKee, second vice president, of Mt. Sterling, Ky.; Wallace Weil, third vice president, of Paducah, Ky., and H. V. Davis, secretary and treasurer, of Louisville.

DISCUSS SPREAD OF INDEPENDENT TELEPHONES.

Kentucky Associaiton Holds Annual Meeting and Elects Officers For Ensuing Year.

The annual meeting of the Kentucky Independent Telephone Association was held yesterday at the Louisville Home Telephone building. Companies in most of the towns and cities in the State were represented. It developed that in the State there are about 150 corporations giving independent telephone service, with 50,000 subscribers. It surprised the delegates to learn that the movement was so widespread and the territory so well developed throughout the different sections of the State.

Subjects of importance to the independent telephone interests were discussed and the delegates to the National Interstate Telephone Association convention, to be held in Chicago on June 26, 27 and 28, were elected as follows:

W. J. A. Armstrong, president and general manager Louisville Home Telephone Company, Louisville; M. S. Taylor, general manager Fayette Home Telephone Company, Lexington; J. W. Chambers, secretary and general manager Old Kentucky Telephone Company, Winchester; R. T. Hickman, Henderson Telephone and Telegraph Company, Henderson; M. J. Thomas, Shelby Home Telephone Company, Shelbyville.

New officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: M. B. Overly, general manager Central Home Telephone Company, Louisville, president; H. K. Cole, secretary and general manager the Kentucky and Indiana Telephone Company, Owensboro, secretary; M. J. Thomas, Shelbyville, vice president First district; Frank M. Hoge, Hopkinsville, vice president Second district; M. S. Taylor, Lexington, vice president Third district; P. H. Murphy, Nicholasville, vice president Fourth district; J. W. Brambers, Winchester, treasurer.

The State was divided into four districts and arrangements were made to hold in each district at least four meetings a year to the end that the independent telephone movement might be fully discussed, ideas exchanged and a systematic and intelligent campaign carried on for its development and extension.

A suit to recover $25,000 damages for alleged personal injuries was filed in the Floyd Circuit Court at New Albany yesterday by John L. Miller through his attorneys, Stotsenburg & Weathers, against the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company. Negligence and carelessness on the part of the company and its servants were given as the cause of the accident.

The plaintiff avers in his complaint that while in the employ of the defendand company, March 27, 1905, as a brakeman, he was attempting to display a signal light from the rear platform of the train on which he was running, and on account of a defect in the guard rail he was thrown to the track below. He avers that he sustained a broken shoulder, his hearing was destroyed, his spine injured and his sight impaired. Through these injuries he asserts that he has been permanently crippled, rendered helpless and his power to earn money destroyed.

Negro Seriously Wounded.

Capt. William Adams, Chief of the Metropolitan Police, New Albany, shot and seriously wounded H. W. Wilson, colored, in a house on Prospect street, in the North Side suburb, about 7 o'clock last evening, the bullet taking effect near the left nipple. It struck one of the ribs, was deflected, passed around the body and was cut out of the muscles of the back. Wilson was taken to the Central police station, where his injuries were dressed. Capt. Adams had reason to believe that Wilson had been implicated in the recent burglaries in New Albany and went to his home to arrest him. When he entered the house Wilson made an attempt to escape through a window and, finding he was cornered, turned on the officer with a knife in his hand. Capt. Adams drew a pistol and fired. Upon searching the house Capt. Adams found a quantity of the property that had been stolen. Among the articles were several fine diamond rings and two watches.

—In order to accommodate those desirous of having part in the Home-coming festivities this week the interurban cars will be run on a fifteen-minute schedule from early morning until the last car at night. This arrangement will be in effect during the remainder of the week.

—Wheat harvest began in Harrison county several days ago, and by the close of this week all the grain of the county will be in the shock. The crop in the southern part of the county is reported exellent, but that in the northern portion will not be more than a half yield.

—Postmasters at West Baden and French Lick Springs have been notified of advances in their salaries, awarded on account of increased business during the past year. The West Baden postmaster has been increased from $1,500 to $1,600 a year, and the increase at French Lick was from $1,800 to $2,000 a year.

—The meeting of the Woman's Foreign Society of the Third Presbyterian church that was to have been held at the home of Mrs. Charles McClintick this afternoon has been postponed until Friday afternoon of next week, on account of the convention of the Christian Endeavor Society now in session in this city.

—Michael Lemmel, a veteran of the Civil War, died a few days ago at his home in Posey township, Harrison county, of old age. He was seventy-nine years old, and leaves a large family. He served in the Thirteenth Indiana cavalry, enlisting on the first call for troops and remaining in the service until the surrender.

—Arrangements are being made by the Grangers of Harrison county for their second annual picnic, to be held in the Fair Grounds at Corydon, August 1. Addresses will be delivered by the Hon. Aaron Jones, of Indianapolis, Master of the State Grange of Indiana, and the Hon. George P. Grant, of New Jersey, lecturer of the National Grange.

—A few days ago Charles Reising, a farmer living in Harrison county, twelve miles northwest of this city, was attacked by a swarm of bees while watering his horses at a pond. The animals, frightened by the insects, ran away, and Reising took refuge in the orchard, protecting himself from the sting of the insects by covering his head with his coat.

—Mr. A. J. McIntosh has issued invitations to the marriage of his daughter, Miss Sadie McIntosh, to Dr. Maurice Henry Reschig, to be solemnized at the home of the bride Wednesday night, June 27. Miss McIntosh is well known in this city, where she has frequently visited, being the granddaughter of the late W. C. DePauw and niece of N. T. and C. W. DePauw.

—At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the public schools to-night it is probable that the teachers for the following school year will be selected. But few changes will be made so far as known, although it is probable that Prof. E. B. Elfers, teacher of mathematics and literature, will retire from the faculty of the High School to take a place with the schools of Cincinnati.

—Mrs Annie R. Glover entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in St. Paul's Place. The polished table was laid with a handsome lace doylies and centerpiece, a vase of white roses occupying the middle. There were present Miss Anna Bragdon, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Browning, Jr., Vance, Chicago; Mrs. John S. McDonald, Mrs. Chas. P. Cook and Mrs. N. B. Bolivin.

—Joseph Daniel, who left here four years ago for Oklahoma, is visiting his brother, Oliver Daniel, Vincennes street. He is living in Pawnee county, near Keystone, and brought with him several boxes of peaches and apples grown on his farm to show the products of that State. Farming operations in Oklahoma, he says, are much farther advanced than in Southern Indiana, the wheat harvest being about completed and the corn "laid by."

He was an inmate of the county infirmary for some time, but a few years ago he made himself known to his New York cousin, who thereafter sent him a check of $50 a year. The dead man will be buried by the county.

CHOKED TO DEATH BY A BURGLAR.

Peru, Ind., June 14.—Mrs. Elizabeth Tresch, aged fifty-one years, was choked to death by a burglar last night. Mrs. Tresch lived for some time after the burglar escaped, and revived long enough to tell of the cause of her death, but was unable to describe her assailant.

COFFEE MARKET.

New York, June 14.—Spot, Rio quiet; No. 7 invoice 7¾c; mild steady. The market for futures opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 5 points and held steady during the greater part of the session on local support. European cables were about as due, but Europe was a seller here during the day, and offerings from this source increased toward the close and the market was finally easy at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points. Sales were reported, with 75 bags, including June at $5.95@$6.10; September at $6.20@6.25; November at $6.40; December at $6.45@6.50; January at $6.55; March at $6.70, and May at $6.85.

New York.—The market opened steady and unchanged to an advance of 5 points on a little local support, while Europe was a moderate seller. Trading was very quiet and total business to midday was not over 12,600 bages, with prices remaining on about the initial level. The European markets made rather a steadier showing than expected, Havre being ¼ pfg. lower. Brazilian news was without fresh feature beyond the fact that the weather has cleared up, and three districts reported fine conditions, while two were cloudy. Rio was 75 reis lower and the rate of Brazilian exchange gained about 1-32 and receipts, while running a little over last year's figures at the ports, are falling short of the figures required to materialize the Karle Krische estimate. Receipts so far for the season show an increase of about 212,000 bags over the figures for the corresponding time last year. The total Brazilian crop received so far has been 9,971,000 bags, against 10,197,000 two years ago and 7,750,000 bags last season. New York warehouse deliveries yesterday were 915,571 bags, against 18,186 last year.—(Ware & Leland.

New York exchange was quoted locally at 50c premium.

The report of the Clearing-house to-day was as follows:

Day's clearing	$2,415,854
Balance	447,410

There was little feature to the local stock market to-day. Louisville Traction common was a shade easier, with sales at the Stock Exchange at 139. West Penn common was stronger, selling at 31. Savannah Electric common was in better request and up a small fraction. For Citizens' National Bank shares 205 was bid and for Columbia Finance and Trust the bid was advanced to 145½. In the outside market St. Louis United Railways common developed decided weakness, declining to 55½ bid and 56 asked. The closing was up ¼, at 55¾ bid. Kansas City common was weak and Portland common sold at 74 and was offered at that. International Traction common sold from 60 to 60¾.

At the Stock Exchange Louisville Traction common was twenty-five shares offered at 142, ten shares at 141 and 139 bid for ten and sold. Fifteen shares more sold at 139. For twenty shares 138¾ was bid and ten shares were offered at 139½. Fifty shares of Rochester Railway preferred were offered at 101¾ and withdrawn, and 101¾ was bid for fifty-two shares. Fifteen shares were offered at 101¾. Fifty shares of Springfield were offered at 87¼. For 100 shares of Savannah common 25 was bid, for ten shares 25¼ was bid and twenty shares were offered at 26¼. West Penn common opened at 30¾ bid for seventy-five shares and twenty-five shares offered at 32. Fifty shares sold at 31 and the closing bid was 31 for twenty-five shares and the closing offer was seventy-five shares at 31¼.

For ten shares of Citizens' National Bank 205 was bid. For fifteen shares of Columbia Finance and Trust 145½ was bid and ten shares were offered at 149. Louisville Gas was ten shares wanted at 140 and five shares offered at 140½. Fifty shares of Louisville Tobacco Warehouse common were offered at 70½ and 118½ was bid for ten shares of the preferred. Rochester Railway and Light 5s were offered at 103½ and interest and $1,000 Springfield 5s were offered at 98¾ and interest. Louisville Home Telephone 5s were $4,000 offered at 87½ and interest.

St. Louis United Railways common closed at 55⅝ bid and 56 asked. At the morning session of the St. Louis Stock Exchange the quotations were 55½ bid and 56 asked. The preferred closed at 83½ bid and 83¾ asked and the 4 per cent. bonds at 88¾ to 89. Kansas City Railway and Light common was a trifle weak, being offered at 60¾ at the close of the Chicago Exchange.

International Traction common was fairly strong and active. Sales were reported as high as 60¾. However, most sales were made at ¾ to ⅞ lower and the closing was 59¾ bid and 60½ asked. The preferred was stronger, selling at 85 and closing at 83 bid and 83¾ asked. San Francisco common sold in New York at 63 and the preferred at 72. Detroit was quoted at 94½ bid and 96¾ rally at the close. The strength of St. Paul, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and B. and O. was notable throughout the day, and we advise purchases of these stocks, particularly St. Paul.—(Dominick & Dominick to Halsey & Halsey.

New York.—On any further decline it is probable that the banking interests will give support, and this will be the signal for the professional element to turn again to the bull side.—(A. O. Brown & Co. to Hunt, Bridgeford & Co.

New York.—There was persistent pressure in Steel common.—(Ex. Norton & Co. to J. J. B. Hilliard & Son.

New York.—The decline was evidently made by inside people to accumulate certain stocks. The rally in the last half hour was decided and should continue, as there is no known reason why we should have lower prices.—(Kelley, Miller & Co. to Almstedt Bros.

New York.—Continued unsettlement and irregularity, pending the elimination of uncertainties from the stock market situation are very likely. We therefore recommend the tradivery likely. We therefore recommend the tradilowing position. We think it inadvisable to follow down too closely the professional bearish operations, and would cover on weak spots now, buying for a turn near indicated support limits.—(Ware & Leland.

New York.—Notwithstanding the general weak market, R. and O. maintained the advance of yesterday and scored higher prices. We think the decline has for the present gone far enough and purchases made at this level, we think, will yield satisfactory profits.—(J. S. Bache & Co. to Washington Flexner & Co.

STOCK MARKET REVIEW.

New York, June 14.—Money on call firmer at 3@3½ per cent.; ruling rate 3½; closing bid 3½; offered at 4; time loans strong; 60 and 90 days 4½ per cent.; six months 4¾; prime mercantile paper 5@5½. Sterling exchange heavy at $4.8500@4.8505 for demand and at $4.8280@4.8285 for 60-day bills; posted rates $4.84 and $4.87; commercial bills $4.82¼@4.82¾. Bar silver 64¼c. Mexican dollars 50c. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds easy.

The sharp break in to-day's stock market was the natural consequence of the market conditions for several days past. The failure of the Government crop report on Monday to sustain prices evidently proved a great disappointment to the speculative operators for the advance. The decline since then has brought a realizing sense of the difficulties of securing profits in the present market. Previous success in advancing prices served to obscure the narrow limits of the market. So long as selling was withheld and the professional element were agreed in buying stocks the rise in prices was not difficult to account for. But the events of the week have awakened the conductors of the campaign to the difficulty of disposing of their stocks at the higher level to which prices have been pushed. Discouragement over this condition undoubtedly prompted a good deal of selling in to-day's market.

The formation of a well organized bear party was also to be perceived in the action of the market and in the attack on some of the stocks made vulnerable by undue manipulation of late. Rumor was very busy with the supposed identity of the leaders of the new bear campaign and the formidable prestige attached to some of the names used by reason of the smashing success of historical campaigns of the past made these rumors an evil portent to the less confident holders of long stock. Amongst the ranks of these were some influential market organizations which had accumulated special stocks into pool holdings. That there was extensive unloading of such pool holdings to-day was the current belief. Reports in some cases had it that the selling of this class was due to the approaching expiration of the date of the pools. Matters of this character are never subject of exact information, and professional traders take full advantage of the natural vagueness of the reports to exaggerate them and distort them with the purpose of influencing sentiment according to their own views.

Actual news bearing on values was scanty, and the market was affected almost altogether by technical causes. In the grain markets, the coarse grains were the subject of some bullish speculation, which affected the small grains to some extent in sympathy. Neither the grain nor the cotton markets offered any supporting factor of stocks, but neither was there anything in the crop news to account for the day's weakness. Iron trade authorities reported some increasing demand for pig iron, but these reports are powerless to offset the influence of the steady supply of United States Steel stocks which is fed into the market on every opportunity. The violent reaction in the price of copper in London may have been an aggravating factor in the special weakness of Amalgamated Copper, and the fall in this stock was of large sentimental effect on the whole list. The same was true of Reading, owing to the large place held by that stock in the recent speculation. Baltimore and Ohio was the only effective point of resistance in the whole market. Its advance was associated with the policy disclosed yesterday by the Pennsylvania railroad authorities in raising dividends on subsidiary stocks. But Baltimore and Ohio has had its recent dividend increased and failed to benefit duly from it, owing to the concurrent increase in the issue of stock. The falling off in domestic exports for May, due to the large decline in the value of cotton sent abroad, was not a favorable factor, owing to the large reliance placed on foreign money sources for relief from strain the coming season. The Treasury Department's call for return of $10,000,000 on deposit with national banks on July 10 was felt to complicate the money outlook. On July 1 falls due the requirement for the second installment of the increase in trust company reserves made obligatory by the new State law. It is estimated that this will call for $12,000,000 addition to the cash now held by the New York companies.—Sun.

The violence of the raid on Reading in the last hour caused the decline to overrun itself and the scramble to cover amongst shorts induced spasmodic rallies. The closing, however, was feverish and unsettled.

FOREIGN FINANCIAL.

London, June 14.—Money was in increased supply to-day, owing to Government disbursements, but this was offset by an increased demand, resulting from the settlement. Discounts were quiet. Prices on the Stock Exchange were somewhat irregular and the tendency was undecided in the absence of fresh investment purchases. Consols and other gilt-edged securities eased on account of talk of a furthr issue of London county stock, but prices hardened later on the good bank return. Foreigners were depressed, due to the poor advices from the continent, where dear money fears checked business. Americans opened heavy, in sympathy with New York, and improved fractionally. Only a small amount of business was transacted pending the receipt of the American opening prices. In the afternoon New York sold the general list under cover and bought Baltimore and Ohio, which closed firm. The other stocks finished dull at a fraction above the lowest quotations of the day. Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 closed at 102. At the close quotations were: Consols for money 88 13-16; do for the account 88 15-16; Anaconda 13⅜; Atchison 92½; do preferred 106½; Baltimore and Ohio 114¼; Canadian Pacific 164¾; Chesapeake and Ohio 59½; Chicago Great Western 19¼; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul 186; De Beers 17⅜; Denver and Rio Grande 47; do preferred 91; Erie 46; do 1st preferred 81½; do 2d preferred 72; Illinois Central 188; Louisville and Nashville 152; Missouri, Kansas and Texas 35¾; New York Central 144; Norfolk and Western 90¾; do preferred 95; Ontario and Western 51½; Pennsylvania 68⅝; Rand Mines 6¼; Reading 71¾; do 1st preferred 47; do 2d preferred 49; Southern Railway 38¾; do preferred 102½; Southern Pacific 67¼; Union Pacific 149¾; do preferred 98; United States Steel 41¾; do preferred 108; Wabash 21½; do preferred 50; Spanish 4s 93. Bar silver quoted at 29 11-16d per ounce. Money 2½@2¾ per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3½@3 9-16 per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for three-months' bills is 3 7-16@3½ per cent.

Paris, June 14.—The tone on the Bourse today was indecisive. Russians were heavy, declining on the report that an effort will be made to float another loan. Russian Imperial 4s closed at 78 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 487.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were again weak, Imperial 4s falling to 72¾ and 5s to 87¾.

Berlin, June 14.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were weaker, especially Russians.

Capt. Harry Burgess, engineer in charge of the Louisville district, says that he hopes to do excellent work in the way of repairing the locks on Green river this summer and fall. COOL IN COURT.

Man Charged With Triple Murder Indifferent.

TAKES IMPRISONMENT WITH ONLY A SMILE.

THIRD MAN KILLED IN FIGHT IDENTIFIED BY SON.

INQUEST SET FOR TUESDAY.

Cool and unconcerned and exchanging jests with his fellow prisoners at frequent intervals, apparently not realizing the seriousness of the crime with which he is charged and indifferent to his punishment, Clarence Sturgeon, the twenty-two-year-old youth who shot three men to death Wednesday afternoon, presented an interesting study in the Police Court yesterday morning to those whose duties have brought them into contact with criminals of all ages and whose offenses have included nearly all in the category of crime.

Undersized, but apparently well nurtured, with a well-shaped head and features not indicative of the criminal, Sturgeon gives the impression of being inoffensive and mild almost to the point of femininity, the only suggestion of turpitude being given by his eyes, which are of the protruding or bulging kind. They also appear to be abnormally large, and at certain points in his conversation are wont to lighten with the fire of latent temper. Of all the men charged with crime coming within their observation, Sturgeon is declared by the court officials to be the coolest and least unconcerned.

* * *

Sleeps Soundly At Night.

Sturgeon, according to the jail keepers, slept soundly throughout the night and ate a hearty breakfast, after which he smoked a number of stogies while waiting to be taken to the Police Court. Not a trace of nervousness was apparent about him when his name was called and the charge of triple murder entered against him.

He answered the questions put to him in clear and distinct tones, and after he had been arraigned on the three murder charges, smilingly accompanied the officers to the patrol wagon, in which he was taken back to the jail and placed in "murderers' row." The cases against him were continued without bond until June 21. His counsel, William Sweeney, announced that the defendant would show that he had killed the men in self-defense.

* * *

Identify Third Victim.

The identity of Sturgeon's third victim, who died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital, was established yesterday afternoon. The body had lain at Bax's undertaking establishment all night, and it is said that many people called during the morning and tried to identify the man without success until Edward Blackerby, of 333 Nineteenth street, came and after looking at the body stated positively that it was that of his father, forty-five years old, a first cousin to Samuel Bruner and John McMichael, Sturgeon's other victims. Besides a wife, seven children survive him. It was said that he left home Wednesday afternoon in company with Bruner and McMichael and that his family did not know of the shooting of the cousins until yesterday morning.

The bodies of Bruner and McMichael were taken to their homes yesterday by the fathers of the young men for burial. McMichael was a son of John McMichael, a well-known farmer of Fox Creek, Anderson county, and Bruner's father, Sam Bruner, is another larmer living near Owensboro.

The funeral of Blackersby will be held at the home this afternoon. The burial will be in Eastern cemetery.

Dr. Harris Kelly, the Coroner, has announced that he will hold the inquest into the deaths of the three men killed by Sturgeon Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

LINCOLN TABLET.

COMMISSION CONSIDERS PLAN FOR MEMORIAL.

Sculptors Will Be Asked To Submit Designs At Future Meeting.

The commissioners appointed by the Governor to commemorate the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln in Hodgensville met at the office of I. B. Nall, 514 Third avenue, yesterday. There were present Charles J. Hubbard, of Larue county; Charles C. Beard, of Ohio county, and I. B. Nall. Robert Enlow and Mr. Jones, of New York, could not be present at this meeting. The board organized by the election of Robert Enlow as chairman and I. B. Nall as secretary.

Plans for the tablet were considered and some designs submitted by Miss Enid Yandell were examined. The secretary was authorized to invite others to make designs, which are to be submitted at a meeting of the board to be held in Hodgensville Tuesday, July 10.

A resolution thanking the Board of Park Commissioners for the invitation to seats on the platform at the exercises of the unveiling of the Boone statue in Cherokee Park Friday was passed and the invitation accepted.

COLORED UNDERTAKERS MEETING IN THIS CITY.

The Colored Undertakers' Association of Kentucky, the only one of its kind in the country, opened its second annual session at Taylor's Hall, 610 Ninth street, yesterday morning. A public session was held the day before at the Plymouth Congregational church and A. S. White delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by L. B. Willis, of Indianapolis. Lewis Williams, of Versailles, read the president's annual report. Several other prominent negroes of this city and of the State also spoke.

A business session was held yesterday, after which Allie J. Melton delivered an address on "Scientific Embalming," which was followed by practical demonstration. "Demonstration on Cadaver," was the title of his address in the afternoon. The session will close with the election of officers and a reception at the home of G. W. Price, at 823 West Walnut street.

FIRST FEMALE PHYSICIAN IN THE UNITED STATES

Mrs. William Coomes, Who Practiced In Kentucky, Entitled To That Distinction.

William Coomes and his wife, Frances, were with a party of emigrants of whom Dr. George Hart was a member, who located in Kentucky. Mr. Coomes was brave and took part in many fights with the Indians. He had numerous adventures and hair-breadth escapes. He reached a high age and was much respected and honored, but it is especially his wife who claims attention in connection with pioneer medicine in Kentucky. She was a woman of remarkable intellect, great originality and fertility of resource, and of strong and noble character. She was the first female who practiced medicine in Kentucky, and according to some she was the first of either sex to exercise the beneficent functions of the healing art in the State. She was physician, surgeon and obstetrician, and her fame and practice extended far and wide, even attracting patients from remote settlements, not only in Kentucky, but in adjoining States.

* * *

First To Make Bread.

Under whatever circumstances she might be placed she was ever actively engaged in useful occupations tending to the welfare of the people around her. This excellent couple came originally from Charles county, Maryland, whence they had moved from the south branch of the Potomac river in Virginia. On the way to Harrod's Station the party encamped for several weeks at Drennon's Lick, in the neighborhood of the present city of Frankfort. Here Mrs. Coomes, aided by those of the party not engaged in hunting, employed herself in making salt, the first time, perhaps, that this article was manufactured in the State. According to a tradition in her family she was the first woman who made bread in Kentucky.

She brought with her from Maryland a supply of calomel, which she administered freely when she thought it needed, but ordinarily she was chary in dispensing it, owing to its being exceedingly expensive. As a substitute for the valuable medicine she would make a sort of extract of the bark of white walnut by boiling the bark to a syrup, which was then made into pills. In those troublous times, when gunshot wounds from the rifles of hostile Indians were almost an every-day occurrence, she often probed for and extracted bullets. Among her more notable surgical achievements, the record of which has come down to our day, there are two especially worthy of mention as showing either a sound, clear and practical judgment or a wonderfully accurate surgical instinct.

The first case occurred in the person of one of her grandchildren, who was born with its feet turned up against its legs. This was a case of congenital talipes calcaneus, the rarest of all the different forms of club foot, and was treated according to correct surgical principles by this backwoods surgeon of the Eighteenth century, not only with brilliant success, the cure being effected with remarkable rapidity. The means adopted consisted of a series of hickory splints, made by herself, of appropriate shape and size, which were kept in position with bandages, the dressing being changed every few days.

* * *

Another Famous Case.

The second case was a man who had come from Virginia to consult this celebrated woman doctor. He had a chronic ulcer somewhere on the lower extremities, constituting a severe lesion, for which he had applied in vain to many physicians. Mrs. Coomes having critically examined the patient informed him that she could cure him, but the treatment would necessarily be severe; if he thought he could endure the suffering it entailed she would be willing to undertake the case. The patient having expressed his willingness to undergo whatever suffering might be necessary in order to effect a cure of his disease, the operative procedures were begun without delay. Her operating table was rather primitive and of rude construction, but not the less effective. It was made out of a piece of timber hewn specially for the purpose, and so constructed as to enable her to strap the patient down upon it with a view to obtain perfect immobility, or as near to it as possible. The patient having been firmly secured in a suitable position, the operator proceeded to make a dam of clay around the diseased locality, in order to protect the surrounding healthy tissues, and then applied a powerful escharotic by pouring hot boiling lard over the affected surface. Doubtless it was a rude procedure, but it was the best the circumstances would permit; and after all, the principle involved was sound, and the brilliancy of the cure was a satisfactory demonstration of the merit of the remedy.

Kentucky, so justly proud of the beauty and virtue of its women, may thus claim to have had the first female physician and surgeon on the continent. What though, she never saw the inside of a medical college! What though the degree of Doctor of Medicine had never been conferred on her! In those days there were few who had; yet her work was good, her success undoubted, and her life was noble. Among her posterity there is a distinguished physician of Louisville—Dr. Martin F. Coomes.

NO THIEVES

HAVE STARTED ACTIVITY IN LOUISVILLE.

Home Coming Has Been Satisfactorily Free From Pickpockets.

In spite of the fact that the city is crowded with visitors, the police say that it is remarkably free from bunco men and pickpockets, and if any are here they are lying low and doing little business. There have been few complaints of robbery and losses and almost no arrests for charges more serious than drunkenness. The reason for this is probably that the bunco men have learned of the strict orders to the police to be on the lookout for any suspicious characters, and after the first wholesale roundup of suspected felons, they have decided that discretion is the better part of valor and have shaken the dust of Louisville from their feet.

"The city has been very quiet and orderly," said a patrolman yesterday, "and there have been no disturbances of any kind. Even with the 'Pike' in full blast and large crowds around there and the Armory, we have had no trouble and have had no complaints or arrests for robbery and pocket picking. We have orders to be on the lookout for all suspicious looking people, and have the names and descriptions of all the well-known pickpockets and confidence men who usually follow the large crowds and travel after the circuses. I don't believe any of them are in the city right now, and if they are they are keeping very quiet."

There were rumors that a pickpocket was trying to operate in the Armory Tuesday and Wednesday, and the police immediately kept a sharp lookout in the crowds, as it would be comparatively easy for a smooth-fingered thief to operate in the dense mass of people that are there all day. They noticed a large, well-dressed man acting rather suspiciously and shadowed him, but either they were mistaken or he took warning and desisted from his efforts.

"The people have shown a great tendency to aid the police in keeping order and preventing disturbances," said one patrolman yesterday who has been handling the crowds in the center of the city, "and it is largely due to their efforts that we have had as little trouble as we have had. The crowds are good-natured and out for amusement and curiosity. They aid the visitors in every way and try to make them feel at home. I think that this has been the easiest gathering to handle in a number of years."

WILLS PROPERTY TO HER FOUR CHILDREN.

The will of Mahala Childers, dated April 6, 1904, and tendered for probate in the County Court yesterday, directs that her estate, including three houses on William street and one on Elmwood avenue, shall go to her four sons, Basil, Henry, Christopher and Scott Y. Childers. The share of Scott Y. Childers is placed in trust for him. Basil Childers is given the personal effects of the testatrix. He is named executor without bond.

Court Paragraphs.

—The Berry Land Company sued Vaclav Cikanek to enforce lien notes for $78.75.

—Amanda Pfeiffer sued John Pfeiffer for alimony, alleging abandonment. They were married in October, 1903.

—Joseph K. Woodruff, executor of the estate of Mary W. Horton and others, sued to secure a division of her estate.

Court of Appeals Decisions.

Curd Williams, etc. vs. J. Smith Hays, etc.—Filed June 6, 1906—(Not to be reported.) Appeal from Laurel Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, affirming.

First—Adverse Possession.—Appellants seek to defeat this action for trespass by appellees, on the ground that they acquired title by certain Sheriff's deeds, but the evidence shows appellees to be the owners of the land in dispute, and therefore entitled to have their title quieted.

Second—Order of court in canceling Sheriff's deed.—In order to entitle the court to cancel the Sheriff's deed, it was not necessary that appellees be made parties to them. These deeds cast a cloud upon their title and they were entitled to have it removed.

R. S. Crawford, for appellants; J. Smith Hays, James M. Hays, for appellees.

Newton Blanton vs. Faris Arnett—Filed May 21, 1906—(Not to be reported.) Appeal from Magoffin Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, affirming.

Lands—Title to—Pleading.—The answer setting up a complete defense to this action to quiet title to land and the action having been submitted a year after this, the court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to set aside the order of submission, and permit the filing of an amended reply, more than a year having elapsed before the motion was made.

D. D. Sublett, for appellee; Byrd & Howard, for appellant.

Thomas Marcum, etc. vs. Ed Davidson, etc—Filed May 25, 1906—(Not to be reported.) Appeal from Breathitt Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, affirming.

Former Appeal—Following opinion in—The lower court having followed the judgment upon a former appeal in this case in setting aside the judgment complained of, its ruling must be approved.

J. J. C. Bach, Kelly Kash, for appellants.

Nickell vs. Hurst (two cases)—Filed May 23, 1906—(Not to be reported.)—Appeal from LIvingston Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, affirming.

Bill of Exceptions—Time of Filing—The bill of exceptions in this case not having been tendered in time as fixed by an order of court, the court could not make valid a bill which was subsequently tendered, and this being true, the errors relied on in this case are not here for review.

W. B. Williams, J. C. Hodge, for appellant; Hendrick & Miller, C. M. Watts, for appellees.

Morgan Turner vs. W. H. C. Johnson, etc.—Filed May 31,1906—(Not to be reported.) Appeal from Floyd Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, affirming.

First—Lands— Ejectment — Pleading.—This was really an action in ejectment, and the prayer to quiet title was surplusage. If possession of the land was adjudged to plaintiff, his title was necessarily quieted.

Second—Same—The issue tendered by the defendant was an equitable one, and therefore the court properly retained the case on the equity side of the docket.

May & May, Greene & VanWinkle, for appellant; James Goble, for appellees.

John Jones, etc., vs. Tennis Coal Co. Filed June 8, 1906. (Not to be reported.) Appeal from Perry Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge O'Rear, affirming.

First—Lands—Claim as to Purchase of Mineral Rights.—This action arising upon the intervening petition of appellant, claiming to have bought the rights in the land prior to their purchase from deceased by appellee, falls for want of proof. The burden was upon appellant and their is a failure of proof to establish his claim.

Second—Evidence.—Evidence upon the trial of this case in the court below offered by appellant of his contract with his deceased brother was incompetent, and the action of the widow in receiving the agreed purchase price of the mineral rights which appellant claims to have bought of his deceased brother could neither bind decedent's estate nor affect any right that appellee had, who relied upon a bond for title executed by decedent to the property claimed to have been acquired by appellant.

Third—Same.—A parol admission is not receivable to prove a fact which, under the rules of evidence, must be proved by a writing.

Gourley & Redwine, Martin T. Kelly, for Appellants; Bailey P. Wooten, Jesse Morgan, Greene & Van Winkle, for appellee.

Perry Begley vs. M. J. Treadway. Filed May 23, 1906. (Not to be reported.) Appeal from Lee Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by Judge Paynter, reversing.

First—Lands—Trespass.—The evidence showing that the land in controversy had been in the actual and adverse possession of appellant and those through whom he claimed for more than twenty years, and that he did not receive anything as a consideration for the alleged exchange of property, it was error for the court to adjudge that it was the property of appellee, who claims to have acquired title by a parol contract.

Second—Same—Parol Contracts for Sale of Land.—From the claim of appellee it appears that his contract for the exchange of the land was by parol, and such a sale is void and will not be enforced.

H. L. Wheeler, for appellant.

CHARGED WITH MISREPRESENTATION.

A warrant was sworn out yesterday by Attorney F. A. Lenz for the Butchertown Brewing Company for the arrest of J. A. Stiths on a charge of perjury. It is alleged that Stiths sold a saloon at 1300 Preston street to Joseph Charters for $500, making an affidavit before a notary public that the business was free from debt with the exception of a small bill for cigars. After Charters had taken charge of the business bills began to pour in, among them being one from the Butchertown Brewing Company for $45 for beer. Charters refused to pay the bill and the company immediately swore out a warrant for the arrest of Stiths, who was not found yesterday.
